"A life is not a dream to be forgotten, nor an old garment to be thrown aside at will. Life is an ever-present thing, and all our past is as much a part and parcel of to-day as the marks we bear in our bodies are portions of ourselves, no matter how we came by them, nor when."—F. Marion Crawford.

BEAUFORT, BEAUFORD, BUFFORD, AND BUFORD.

The name Beaufort—or, as it came to America, Beauford—is French, and as a family name extremely rare, being essentially a place name. Meaning "beautiful fort or castle," it grew into a family name during the eleventh and twelfth centuries, from the ownership of such places, the lords or masters being spoken of as "de Beaufort," of, or belonging to, the beautiful castle.

The given names of both the English and American families—such as John, Thomas, William, Richard, and Robert—are Norman and came to England with the Northmen.

By referring to the extracts given below from old English wills and deeds, it will be seen that the progenitors of the Bufords in America were in England long before John of Gaunt adopted the name of Beaufort for his children or the French Huguenots had emigrated.

John of Gaunt came into possession of the castle of Beaufort, in the Province of Anjou, in France, at the close of the thirteenth century, and from it named his children, by Catherine Swinford "Beaufort," with the title of Duke of Somerset. This family became extinct with the John, who was exiled to France, and was killed in the Battle of Tewksbury, in 1471. An illegitimate branch of this family was given the name of “Somerset,” and in 1682 the title Duke of Beaufort.

There has been, from the earliest day, a tradition in the family in America that they were descendants of John of Gaunt; but this could be only through the female side of the house, and they could then have no legitimate claim to the name of Beaufort and could come by it only by adoption.

The French Beauforts originated with the children of Henry IV and Gabrielle d’Estrees, who became Duchesse de Beaufort, from an estate of the name in Champagne, France, which belonged to her family in 1590 to 1600—too late for the English Buffords to be descended from them. Some members of this family, French Huguenots, emigrated to England after the edict of Nantes, and their descendants are still found in that country and this. They are “Beauforts,” having never changed the spelling of their name.

The first English Beauforts came over with the Conqueror, and got their name, as did the Dukes of Beaufort in Belgium, in the tenth century from the castle of Beaufort, in Namur, Belgium. If they brought any titles with them, none have survived in England, and they became knights, dignitaries of the church, merchants, husbandmen, yeomen, and men of position in every walk of life.

It is not possible, with the data now in the possession of the writer, to connect the American family immediately with the English Buffords. While this is most unsatisfactory, there is no doubt that they are one and the same, and the search for documentary proof which is still going on will probably establish the fact and show which Richard or John was the emigrant to this country and the progenitor of the family in America.

Many members of our family in the United States still spell the name Beauford, having never allowed the change to Buford, which gradually came to be the accepted form. It is readily seen how the change to Bufford would come about in England when one remembers that few people in the tenth, eleventh, and even down to the thirteenth century could read or write, and that literary attainments were confined chiefly to the clergy, lawyers, clerks, etc. Of course it was impossible to convey to a clerk any way of spelling a name other than phonetically, and he wrote what seemed to him correct. There are few of the old wills and deeds examined which do not contain several ways of spelling the name of the same person, and often it is only by close study and comparison that the web is untangled.
Notes made from wills and other documents at Somerset House and various places in England of Bufford, Baford, and Beaiford.

Thomas Bufford, 1370–75. II.

I. RICHARD BEAUFORD, EMIGRANT, 1635, OF LANCASTER COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

II. JOHN AND ELIZABETH PARROTT BEAUFORD, OF CHRISTCHURCH PARISH, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

I. RICHARD BEAUFORD emigrated from Gravesend, England, in the ship Elizabeth, August 1, 1635. Was examined by a minister of the Church of England as to loyalty to the king, took the prescribed oath of allegiance, etc., age eighteen, "Hotten's Lists." He was therefore born 1617–1618. There is no other Beaufort, Beauford, or Buford to be found in any list of immigrants or of emigrants. In the Deed Book of Lancaster County, Virginia, at Lancaster Court House, under date of April 15, 1656, "John Vause assigned Richard Beauford three hundred acres of land lying on the south side Rappahannock River, up in the freshes, bounding on the land of Thomas Hawkins, etc." Nothing else can be found in any record relating to Richard. It is probable that he married a daughter of John Vause and drifted with him and his family into Lancaster County.
When Richard came to America the colony had, by census of 1634, four thousand nine hundred fourteen inhabitants, and was divided into eight littoral shires.

The name Lancaster first appears in the list of counties represented in the House of Burgesses, April, 1652. No act or order for the formation of the county appears to be extant. "By a Court held ye 7th of August, 1654, for ye countye of Lancaster, it was divided into two parishes; the lower included the present counties of Lancaster and Middlesex, and the upper the present counties of Essex and Richmond, and the territory extending indefinitely to the westward, on both sides of the Rappahannock River."

Had he married as early as 1640, he could have had a son old enough to be married in 1662; therefore he is supposed to be the progenitor of the Beaufords, Beauforts, Bluefords, Blufords, Buefords, Burfords, and Buefords, in America, and the descent traced through John Beauford, of Christchurch Parish, Middlesex County, Virginia. That Richard's family record is not given is accounted for by the fact that the register of Christchurch was not begun until 1653. The name is found spelled all these ways. While much of the confusion of this lawless spelling is due to the clerks of the counties and of the parishes, the individuals themselves frequently spelled their names any of these ways, indifferently; in fact, often in several different ways in the same document. Given names were either scarce or clung to with great persistency, and it has been found almost impossible in this genealogy to identify the different Johns, Thomases, Jameses, and Williams except by their immediate families. Although there were at first no middle names, in deeds and other legal documents, where it was necessary for both husband and wife to sign, the initials of both their given names were frequently signed before their surnames. This was also the custom in marking silver, linen, and other household goods. The name Buford seems to have been evolved, in America, by a gradual process of reducing to the simplest and easiest spelling, in the course of a hundred years, until by general consent and agreement it was adopted as the family name, after the Revolution. Although the very same process had taken place in England before there were any emigrants of the name to America, Richard and his descendants did not recognize the change, if they knew of it. In some cases the name is still spelled Burford. No attempt has, however, been followed to a successful conclusion to trace the Burford family, as no starting point could be found to connect them with the Bufords. This spelling, Burford, is found in Middlesex County, and for that reason it is to be presumed that they are descended from the Beaufords.

In the register of Christchurch, Middlesex County, 1653–1812, among the first entries,—in fact, the sixth,— is the marriage of John Blueford and Elizabeth Parrot, April 11, 1662. He was then probably twenty years of age and, therefore, born in 1642. It is also probable that he was the son of Richard, and not born in Middlesex County, where Richard is found in 1656, but came there with his father, for in the register there is an entry to the effect that Richard Perrott, Jr., who was born the 24th of February, 1650, was the first male child that was born in that county of English parents.

In a deed in the land office, Richmond, Virginia, dated March 17, 1663, Sir William Berkeley, knight, governor of Virginia, "grants to John Beauford and Francis Broughton three hundred (300) acres of land lying in the County of Lancaster (now Middlesex), and upon the south side of the Rappahannock River, adjoining the land of Richard Lewis, said land being due John Beauford and Francis Broughton by and for the transportation of six persons, etc." Sir William Berkeley had obtained government land grants, in which was included Lancaster County, and to encourage settlement he issued grants of fifty acres for each person transported to the colony. Among those brought over were members of families already in the colony, servants and slaves, both white and black. To obtain a grant it was simply necessary to pay the passage money of the person transported. Middlesex, owing to its accessibility both for export and import, became the fountain-head of the most aristocratic colonists and the source from which sprang many of Virginia's most prominent families. Here were the Berkeleys, Skipwiths, Brandons, Wormsleys, Corbins, Carters, Conways, Balls, Washingtons, Lewises, and hundreds of others. Now there is not only no vestige of these names left there, but no traces of many of their homes. The old church has been in ruins many years, trees have grown up inside its walls and the old tombs surrounding it allowed to decay and disappear.

2. JOHN BEAUFORD, of Christchurch Parish, Lancaster County, Virginia, married Elizabeth Parrat, April 11, 1662. Children—Thomas, born 1663; Ambrose, 1665; Susannah, 1667; Elizabeth, 1669.

   John Beauford died April 18, 1722.

   Thomas Beauford died December 9, 1716.

   Mary Beauford died December 29, 1720.

3. AMBROSE, son of John and Elizabeth Parrat Beauford, born in Lancaster County, Virginia, 1669. Married Elizabeth ———. Daughter—Elizabeth, who was baptized September 10, 1693.

3. SUSANNAH, daughter of John and Elizabeth Parrat Beauford, born in Lancaster County, Virginia, 1667. Married Thomas Guy, October 14, 1689.

PARROT.

The name is found spelled Perrott, Parat, Paret, and Parrott, and is traced from England to Barbadoes and to Virginia. Richard Perrott was one of the first settlers of Lancaster County. His wife's name was Margaret, and there has been found, in the colony, no further record of her. They were probably married in England or in Barbadoes, where their first child, Elizabeth, was born. They were in Lancaster County as early as 1649. In the register of Christchurch, Middlesex Parish, is the following memorandum: "Richard, Sone of Mr. Richard Perrott, Senior, was borne the 24th of February, 1650, being the first man child that was begott and borne in Rappannock River of English parents."

RICHARD, SR., was a vestryman of Christchurch, a commissioner of Lancaster County in 1656, elected High Sheriff June 5, 1657, and Senior Justice of Middlesex County Court 1673, until his death. Frequent mention is made of him in Virginia history, and Bishop Meade, in his "Old Families and Churches," states that he was appealed to while in England on one of his visits to bring out a minister for the church.

The register contains also the following entry: "Whereas Mr. Richard Perrott hath built a Pew in the Chancell on the further side opposite to the Pulpitt and a stable also, which Pew and Stable is for the use of Henry Corbin Esq., properly belonging to him and to those that shall have and enjoy the house and land whereon he hath now built on and forever September 29, 1669."

RICHARD, SR., died November 11, 1686. In his will he mentions his wife, Margaret, and his grandsons, Henry and Richard, sons of Richard, Jr. His plantations were in Middlesex County, one of them, of one thousand acres, was on the north side of the Pyankatank River. His wife, Margaret, died January 30, 1687. Children—Elizabeth, 1645; Richard, Jr., February 24, 1650.

2. ELIZABETH married, April 11, 1662, John Bleuford.

2. RICHARD, JR., married, February 11, 1672, Mrs. Sarah Curtis Halfhide. "She was born in Ware Parish, Gloster County on a Sunday about 2 o'clock afternoon the 16th of Aug. 1657, being the daughter of Major Thomas Curtis by his wife Averilla, she was when married to Richard the widow of Mr. William Halfhide. "The names of what Children (and the times when) have been borne to aforesaid Mr. Richard and Sarah Perrott of Middlesex County—Henry, January 25, 1675; Frank, daughter, August 28, 1677; Sarah, September 21, 1679; Richard 3d, October 5, 1681; Averilla (also spelled Efflorilla), August 3, 1683; Robert, October 25, 1685; Curtis, August 19, 1688, and Mary, January 19, 1690."

Sarah Curtis Perrott died 1693-4.

3. RICHARD 3d, son of Richard, Jr., and Sarah Curtis Perrott, married, 1705, Sara ————. Children—Henry, born February 25, 1706; Richard 4th, 1708; William, December 27, 1712.

Richard 3d died January 11, 1734.

3. ROBERT, SR., son of Richard, Jr., and Sarah Curtis Perrott, married, March 25, 1706, Catherine Daniel. Children—Robert, Jr., April 27, 1707; Sarah, February
6, 1708, died March 13, 1701; William, May 20, 1712; Betty, December 3, 1714; John, November 12, 1720; James, November 11, 1722.

Robert, Sr., died August 9, 1723, and his wife married, July 17, 1728, John Williams.

4. ROBERT, JR., son of Robert, Sr., and Sara Perrott, married Sarah. Children—James, born January 25, 1732; Ludowick, January 26, 1734; Sarah, March 25, 1737.

Robert, Jr., died December 13, 1737.

3. AVERILLA, daughter of Richard, Jr., and Sarah Curtis Perrott, married Joseph Hardee. Children—Averilla, baptized April 22, 1705, died February 7, 1720; Joannah, baptized August 3, 1707; Joseph, Jr., baptized October 23, 1709, died December 27, 1734; Mary, born May 18, 1711; Charles, July 19, 1715; Perrott, April 4, 1718; Sarah, October 19, 1720.

Joseph Hardee died March 28, 1729.

3. CURTIS, son of Richard, Jr., and Sarah Curtis Perrott, married, September 3, 1714, Anne Daniel. Children—Clara, born April 21, 1716; Curtis, Jr., January 30, 1718; Averilla, June 16, 1721; Anne, February 20, 1723, died November 16, 1739; Agatha, May 12, 1727; Charles, June 22, 1729; Daniel, August 10, 1732; Francis, December 6, 1734.

3. MARY, daughter of Richard, Jr., and Sarah Curtis Perrott, married, September 16, 1708, Hobbs Weekes. Children—Elizabeth, baptized October 3, 1709; Millicent, born May 2, 1713; Thomas, June 11, 1715; Abraham, September 22, 1717.
III.

4. THOMAS AND ELIZABETH BEAUFORD, OF CHRISTCHURCH PARISH, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

5. JOHN AND JUDITH BEAUFORD, OF BROMFIELD PARISH, CULPEPER COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

4. THOMAS, JR., of the County of Middlesex and Parish of Christchurch, son of Thomas and Mary Beauford, born 1682, married Elizabeth.—Children Agatha, born August 13, 1705; John, born 1707, baptized September 21, 1707; Elizabeth, born 1709; Sarah, 1712, baptized April 6, 1712; Mary, August 20, 1716; Anne, July 4, 1718.

Thomas, Jr., died 1761. His will is dated October 24, 1751, and was probated July 7, 1761. He lends his wife, Elizabeth, all his estate, both real and personal, during her lifetime, which is bequeathed after her death to his son John. Mentions his daughters, Agatha Lee, Sarah Wisdom, Mary Lee, and Elizabeth Early, and his grandchildren, John, Anne, James, Elizabeth, and William Buford. The grandson John here mentioned was the son of John and Judith (see below), whose name was afterwards changed to Thomas.

5. AGATHA, daughter of Thomas, Jr., and Elizabeth Beauford, born in Lancaster County, Virginia, August 13, 1705, married, July 16, 1724, George Twyman. Children—Elizabeth, born June 28, baptized July 25, 1725, died August 29, 1727; William, May 27, 1727; Catherine, June 13, 1729; George, March 19, 1731. Agatha's husband, George Twyman, must have died soon after this, as Agatha married John Warwick, of Lancaster County, March 8, 1735. Children of John and Agatha—Abraham, born May 19, 1738, and Elizabeth, August 6, 1740.

John Warwick, who was the son of Thomas and Mary Warwick, was born March 14, 1711, and died April 4, 1744. In her father's will, made in 1751, Agatha is called Agatha Lee, hence must have again married after the death of John Warwick, in 1744.

In Middlesex County, Christchurch Parish, there was also another George Twyman, who married Katherine. They had a daughter Katherine, born April 19, 1702, and was married to John Tomson, April 13, 1727. There was a Katherine Twyman who married Philippe Warwick, September 5, 1705.

5. JOHN, son of Thomas, Jr., and Elizabeth Beauford, born in Lancaster County, Virginia, 1707, married Judith. Children—(John) Thomas, born 1736; Anne, born 1738; James, 1740; Elizabeth, 1742; William, 1745; Abraham, July 31, 1749; Henry, September 19, 1751; Mary, 1753; Francis, 1754; Simeon, 1756.

John and Judith Beauford settled in Bromfield Parish, Culpeper County, Virginia, on a tract of land situated on the Rapid Ann and Beautiful Run, the deed to which bears date August 9, 1735, from Governor Gooch. At that time the country was a wilderness, and almost inaccessible, except by the Rappahannock River. John Beauford soon after marrying left Middlesex County, with his brother-in-law, Jeremiah Early, the Kirtleys, Blackburns, Lewises, and Bohannons, as pioneers to this almost unknown but beautiful country. There had been a settlement made at Germana,—the name now ruthlessly changed by the Post-office Department to “Wilderness,” —by Governor Sportswood, in 1714, where he had opened iron works and encouraged German immigration. Orange, Culpeper, and Madison Counties were then all comprehended in Culpeper County, and that comprehended in Lord Fairfax’s grant, the Northern Neck. John Beauford bought additional and adjoining land from Lord Fairfax, the deed bearing the date of April 10, 1751. In 1770 Thomas, eldest son of John, sold to Henry Lewis one hundred and sixteen acres of land adjoining his father’s, and the following December his father bought this, with other land near, making five hundred and eighty-two acres, from Henry Lewis.
There were many other deeds for land purchased by John; in fact, he was one of the largest landowners in the county. The homestead was established by the following deed: "Twenty-sixth day of June, anno doo- money, one thousand seven hundred and thirty-nine, William Phillipps, of Orange, St. Mark's Parish. From the day after date of these presents and during the term of one hole year from thence. Next to be completed and ended, yealding and paying therefore yearly the Rent of one peper corn at the feast of St. Michael, the archangle, if the same be lawfully demanded.

[Signed,] Wm. Phillipps to John Beauford."

This tract of land was situated in the fork of Robinson River and the Rapid Ann, on the south side of Beautiful Run, and adjoining the land of William Phillipps, in what is now Madison County, near Wolftown.

All these pioneers were churchmen, and first worshiped in a small log church, in what is now Green County, built in 1723-1730, with a fort, on the road from Standardville to Charlottesville, eight or ten miles south of the Beauford residence. Nothing is now left of either the fort or the church, and the records of St. Thomas' Parish, in which they were, have been lost. Later the family were worshipers at "Vauter's" church, in Madison County, situated about two miles east of Wolftown, on the road to Madison, and three miles from their home, in St. Mark's Parish. But in 1751 this was cut off and made Bromfield Parish. This church was abandoned in 1798, and only the prayer-book is now in existence.

From 1735–1739 the Scotch-Irish emigrants from Pennsylvania settled both in Culpeper County, and farther south, in the Burden tract. Whether they were more devoted to their form of worship or whether the church people grew indifferent and lost their identity through separation from their church and lack of ministers, who were generally sent out from England, it is true the former absorbed almost the whole northwest; from here sprang the very flower of Kentucky’s first settlers. On the site of the Beauford residence, near Wolftown, there now stands only a few locust trees, no houses, no tombstones, where stood the first two-story house built in that part of the world. People came from far and near to see it and drink coffee, a beverage then almost unknown in that country.

John Beauford’s will is dated September 13, 1785, and probated September 17, 1787. He probably died a short time prior to the latter date. As he does not mention his wife in his will, she probably died before he did. He bequeathed lands to his sons Abraham and Simeon—his other children had no doubt been provided for—also mentions his grandsons John and William, sons of Simeon. Abraham and Simeon were made executors.
IV.

6. THOMAS AND ANN WATTS BUFORD, OF BROMFIELD PARISH, CULPEPER COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

6. THOMAS, eldest son of John and Judith Beau-ord, was born in Bromfield Parish, Culpeper County, Virginia, 1736. Married Ann Watts in 1756. Children —John, born October 13, 1757; William, and Nancy. Thomas' will dated August 20, 1774, probated at a court held in Bedford County, November 28, 1774, left all his property to his three children, reserving one-third for his wife, Ann, for life, at her death to go to the children. James Buford was made guardian, and Ann gave up her rights as executrix to him. Services of Thomas Buford, as given by his brother James to the Bedford Court, accompanying an application for bounty lands: “Served as sergeant under Braddock and was discharged 1754, also served as sergeant under Braddock and was discharged 1756. Served under Colonel Washington as lieutenant and was discharged in 1758, as a lieutenant under Colonel Byrd and was discharged 1759, also served in another regiment under Colonel Byrd and was discharged.” For these services land warrants Nos. 663 to 667, issued March 11, 1800, for six thousand six hundred and sixty-six and two-thirds acres. The entire grant was located on the Ohio River, fourteen miles below the Big Sandy River, and assigned to Abraham Buford for full value received, and the Register requested to issue patents to said Abraham Buford, in a deed made by John Buford, Jr., son of Thomas, and James his guardian, dated July 27, 1787. Thomas had also bounty lands, which were entered by James Buford as guardian of Thomas' children. "For services performed in the last war." He was captain of a company from Bedford County, which he commanded, together with two companies, one from the east of the ridge and the other from the west of the James, under Colonel William Christian, in General Lewis' expedition against the Indians. He was killed at the Battle of Point Pleasant, October 10, 1774. (Foote's History of Virginia.) The lands located under these warrants seem to have been of little benefit to any one. Colonel Abraham Buford, under date October, 1796, informed his brother Henry, "There are two or three thousand acres preemption surveyed in it, which takes the best part with my improvements."

7. JOHN, eldest son of Thomas and Ann Watts Buford, born October 15, 1757. Enlisted at the age of sixteen in his father's company, and served three years. His name is found on the pension roll of 1840. Made application for pension July 27, 1835, at which time he

PATE.

Richard Pate had patented as early as 1650 one thousand one hundred and forty acres on Poropotanck Creek, and was burgess of Gloucester in 1653. Administration on his estate was granted to his nephew, John Pate, in 1657. This John Pate, Hening records as "added to the Commission of Gloucester in 1660" (II, 15), and the only extant volume of the General Court proceedings shows that he was "admitted & sworne one of ye Counsell of State of this Colony November 20, 1671." In this volume it is further stated that at a court held November 8, 1672, "Coll'il John Pate, Esq'r, dyeing posset of a considerable estate in this country, left a widow out of this country, and Mr. Thomas Pate, brother's son to the said Pate, dec'd, appears and petitions for administration on his said Unkle’s estate, which is accordingly granted him,” whereupon the said Pate furnished as his securities Major Richard Lee and Captain John Armistead. This was the Major Thomas Pate, of Petsworth Parish, Gloucester, at whose house Nathaniel Bacon, the rebel, died in October, 1676, being buried in the bed of Poropatanck to prevent Berkeley from hanging his corpse on the gibbet. The records of Gloucester having been destroyed in 1820, it is difficult to trace the descendants of this family, but Major Thomas Pate seems to have left at least two sons, John and Mathew.—Virginia Historical Magazine.

There were intermarriages between the Cary, Pate, and Wills families. The Pate family is long since extinct.

7. JUDITH, daughter of James and Elizabeth Bramblett Buford, married, March 1, 1787, Thomas Scruggs.

7. ELIZABETH, daughter of James and Elizabeth Bramblett Buford, married, in 1774, William Scruggs.

7. FRANCES, daughter of James and Elizabeth Bramblett Buford, married her cousin, Thomas Buford, son of William Buford and Mary Welsh Buford. (See William Buford 1st, below.)
ELIZABETH BUFORD CALLOWAY, WILLIAM, AND MARY WELSH BUFORD.

6. ELIZABETH, daughter of John and Judith Beauford, probably married a Calloway. Frequent mention is found of "Sister Elizabeth Calloway" in her brother's letters.

6. WILLIAM, son of John and Judith Beauford, born in Culpeper County, Virginia, 1745, married Mary Welsh. Children—Judith; Thomas, born 1776; Polly; Elizabeth, 1781; Frances; Amelia, and William. His name appears in the Bedford County, Virginia, records 1771-1788. He probably went to Kentucky about the latter date, settled in Lincoln County, now Garrard, and was living there 1802-1805. He went to Rockcastle County, and was living there 1814. The records of the Pension Office show that William Buford (also borne as Bluford and Blewford) served as a private in Captain Samuel Booker's company, 5th and 11th regiments, commanded by Colonel William Russell, formerly known as Captain Edwin Hull's company, 15th Virginia battalion, commanded by Colonel James Innes, Revolutionary War. This organization was also known as the 11th and 15th Virginia regiments, incorporated as the 11th and 15th Virginia regiment. He enlisted December 17, 1776, to serve three years, and his name last appears on the roll for December 2, 1779, which bears the remark, "Discharged December 2."

7. THOMAS, son of William and Mary Welsh Buford, born in Bedford County, Virginia, 1776, married, December 21, 1797, Frances Buford, daughter of James and Elizabeth Bramblett Buford, who was born in 1779. (See James, above.) Children—William, born September 27, 1798, never married, and died at Lancaster, Kentucky, May 24, 1864; Eliza, May 12, 1800; Thomas Jefferson, January 22, 1802; Mary (Polly) June 12, 1804, never married, died May 4, 1882; Chapman, born September 27, 1806, died June, 1807; Emily; Thomas, January 10, 1809; Luther, 1812; James, November 26, 1815; John Tilford, 1818, died 1825; Alexander Bryan, October 31, 1820.

Thomas Buford went to Kentucky with his father about 1796, and settled in Lincoln County near the present town of Lancaster. He was sheriff of Garrard County for several years, and held other local trusts.
He was a member of the Kentucky Legislature 1806–1809, State Senate, 1809. During the War of 1812 was a deputy quartermaster of the Northern Army. He died in 1863.

8. ELIZA, daughter of Thomas and Frances Buford, married Mr. Hammond, of Madison County, Kentucky. They have several children living.

8. THOMAS JEFFERSON, son of Thomas and Frances Buford, married Mrs. Kanifax. Children, seven—William L., Alex, Tom, and Charles, who live in Iowa. Thomas Jefferson was in the Kentucky Legislature from Harlem County in 1835, from Laurel County in 1838–1843. He died in 1862.

8. EMILY THOMAS, daughter of Thomas and Frances Buford, married Granville Love. Children—Alexander (died), Thomas, and Mary. Emily Buford Love died 1840.

9. THOMAS LOVE, son of Granville and Emily Buford Love, lives in Mt. Sterling, Kentucky.

8. LUTHER, son of Thomas and Frances Buford, married Mrs. Morrison. No children. Dr. Luther Buford graduated at the Philadelphia Medical College with high honors, practised medicine in Mt. Sterling for a number of years, where he died in 1881.

8. JAMES, son of Thomas and Frances Buford, married, 1844, Elizabeth Gates, of Lincoln County, Kentucky. Children—Mary Frances, 1846; Emily Thomas, 1849; Elizabeth Shouse, 1853; James L., 1856; Jockil M., 1860.

7. POLLY, daughter of William and Mary Welsh Buford, married Elijah Kirtley. Son—William. Live at Mt. Sterling, Kentucky. (See Kirtley, under Frances, daughter of John and Judith Buford.)

Captain Abner Baker married, first, Sarah, daughter of Stephen Giles and Betsy P. Letcher. No children. (See Letcher, under Robertson, under Abraham Buford.) His father, Caleb, with his two brothers, Samuel and Andrew, emigrated from England early in the eighteenth century to Pennsylvania. They were artisans, commissioned by the king to manufacture and supply arms to the colonies, which they did until the Revolution, when they turned their establishment over to the Whigs. Caleb afterwards settled in Prince Edward County, Virginia. Captain Abner Baker died January 6, 1861. Elizabeth B. Baker died February 11, 1826.

7. FRANCES, daughter of William and Mary W. Buford, married ——— Young.

7. AMELIA, daughter of William and Mary W. Buford, married ——— Tilford, Shepardsville, Kentucky, or one of them married ——— Bowman.

7. WILLIAM, son of William and Mary W. Buford, married Rebecca Day. Had children.

8. MARY, who married James Chestnut. Live at Rockcastle County, Kentucky.

8. JEFFERSON, who married Nancy Parsons. Had several children, one named William.

8. FRANKLIN, who married, and lived in Jeffersonville, Indiana.

8. LEONIDAS married Ann Cook, and died, leaving three children. She married the second time, and lives at Beria, Kentucky.

6. COLONEL ABRAHAM AND MARTHA McDOWELL BUFORD.

6. ABRAHAM, son of John and Judith Beauford, born in Culpeper County, Virginia, July 31, 1749, married, October 4, 1788, Martha McDowell, who was born June 26, 1766, daughter of Samuel and Mary McClung McDowell. Children—Samuel, never married, born July 19, 1789; John, never married, February 24, 1792; Charles, June 30, 1797; Abraham, Jr., never married, September 25, 1800; William McDowell, March 12, 1803; Mary, December 2, 1805.

In June and July, 1775, relations between Lord Dunmore, the royal governor of the colony and the House of Burgesses were strained to the point of rupture. In October he took up his residence on board a ship of war, at Williamsburg, and the House of Burgesses, after appointing a committee with unlimited powers of government, adjourned.

The committee at once took measures to raise a sufficient armed force to defend the colony, and the royal government ended forever in Virginia. A corps of volunteers was called for, and, in response to the call, three hundred men assembled at Culpeper Court House; one-third of them were Culpeper men, who adopted a flag bearing the device of a coiled rattlesnake and the motto, "Don't tread on me." They were dressed in green hunting shirts, with "Liberty or Death" on their breasts, bucks' tails in their hats, and tomahawks and scalping knives in their belts.

Howe, in his history of Virginia, says Culpeper County furnished five companies, of eighty-four men each, and that Captain Buford's company was among them.

These volunteers, under command of Colonel Stevens, marched to Williamsburg, where they joined Colonel Woodford's forces. Dunmore and his ships were compelled to flee from that place, and with an increased force he threatened Hampton.

The Culpeper men under Colonel Woodford were ordered to protect the town, and on the 25th of October repulsed Dunmore's attack and drove him off, with heavy loss, gaining a signal victory. Dunmore proceeded to Norfolk with his fleet, raised the royal standard, declared martial law and freedom to slaves; he sent landing parties into the adjoining counties, and employed every means of inciting the Indians against the colonists. Woodford went to the protection of Norfolk, and the militia of that section was called out.

Dunmore took possession of and fortified Great Bridge, on the Elizabeth River, by which route the patriots approached the town, and on the 9th of December attacked the patriots, who had thrown up a redoubt on the other side of the bridge. His force, consisting of British regulars, Tories, negroes, and Indians, was repulsed and driven back over the bridge. The Culpeper battalion, acting with the greatest daring and bravery, attacked the Royalists on the left flank, causing a complete rout. Dunmore again fled to his ships, and Woodford entered the town (Norfolk) on the 14th of December.

The Royal fleet was reinforced, and on the 31st, under a heavy fire from the ships, men landed and set fire to the town, and in two days the destruction was complete. The patriots met with only slight losses. They succeeded in driving back each invading force and in holding the town. Colonel Stevens and his little band remained on the ground until February, when they destroyed what remained, removed the families of the patriots to places of safety, and abandoned it. The colonial forces were scattered, to protect the coast. Dunmore abandoned Norfolk in May, proceeded to the Chesapeake, and afterwards joined the fleet in New York; from there towards the close of the year he sailed for England.

In the Virginia Records 1776–1777, Revolutionary Archives of Virginia Militia, in the state library of Richmond, under date of September 7, 1776, "ordered that a warrant be issued to Captain Abraham Buford, of the Culpeper Minute Men, for one hundred and fifty pounds, five shillings, and nine pence, for the use of himself, Lieutenant Gallison, and Ensign Roberts, for rations, forage, arms, wagons, hire, etc." After Dunmore's flight the coast of Virginia enjoyed comparative quiet. A call for troops for the Continental Army from Virginia was made, and fifteen regiments were allotted to her. Probably not more than three of these were ever filled.

On the 13th of November, 1776, Abraham Buford was appointed major of the 14th Virginia. The officers, who were appointed to recruit their own men, were hurried to the front, and joined the army with just what men they could muster, in most cases representing only the nucleus of a regiment. When Washington was assembling the Continental Army at and about New York, and during the discouraging campaign which resulted in the retreat into New Jersey, in December, prior to the beginning of the campaign of '77, the army was reorganized and many promotions made. The 14th Virginia was probably merged into the 5th Virginia, with Josiah Parker as colonel and Abraham Buford as lieutenant-colonel from April 1, 1777, which with the 15th Virginia formed a battalion of the 11th Virginia, Colonel Daniel Morgan, during the campaign of '77, ending with the retreat to Valley Forge.

In the reorganization of the spring of 1778, Abraham Buford was made colonel of the 15th Virginia, from May 15, 1778, which was still a battalion of the 11th Virginia, he acting as lieutenant-colonel of both regiments.

Colonel Morgan was transferred to the 7th Virginia, and Buford was promoted to colonel of the 11th and 15th regiments September, 1778, and transferred to the 3d Virginia February 12, 1781.

Dr. William Read, of Georgia, surgeon Continental Army, in his reminiscences mentions that "his old friend, Colonel Abraham Beauford, together with himself, Colonel Carvel Hall, and Major Graham, met and devised means of aiding, with clothing and supporting, the women and children who were camp followers during the severe winters while the army was in New Jersey."

"They resolved to erect a theater and to give a play, to raise funds for these wretched creatures. A hall was gratuitously furnished at Brunswick. The party contributed money and material, fitted up a pit and scenery, and commenced acting. The ladies of Brunswick took a great interest in the plan, and did much to encourage and assist the organization. Young college boys took the parts of women, and their sisters furnished dresses, which were made of camblet. The intention was understood and applauded, and the scheme most successful."

"Clothing and supplies got out of New York by industry and private correspondence." Dr. Read says that he never saw Colonel Buford after this, and adds that he was killed at the St. Clair Massacre. Of course he was mistaken in this. Saffel's records of the Revolution make frequent mention of Colonel Buford during his connection with the army in the neighborhood of New York, Valley Forge, Brunswick, and Trenton.

The foregoing is taken from—

During the campaign of 1778–1779 the Continental Army held its own in the North, and finally wore out the British forces and compelled them to begin operations in the South. The actual seat of war was transferred to North and South Carolina. The Virginia troops had gradually decreased in number in four years, by losses, expiration of enlistments, etc., from six thousand to two thousand five hundred, and probably few of the original organizations remained. Colonel Buford was in Virginia early in 1780 enlisting new men for the relief of Charleston. In May he left Petersburg with about three hundred men and one field piece, gathered promiscuously from near that place, and had proceeded as far as Lanman's Ferry, on the Santee, when he received intelligence of the surrender of Charleston. General Huger, senior officer in Carolina, was asked for instructions. He directed Colonel Buford to retire to Hillsborough, by the way of Camden, taking with him or destroying the stores that had been collected there, and also to move from that place thirty or forty prisoners. In accordance with these instructions, such stores as could not be taken away were destroyed, and Buford on the way to Hillsborough halted to rest his horses at Waxhaws Creek, about nine miles north of Lancaster Court House. Cornwallis, with about two thousand five hundred men, had reached Lanman's Ferry a few days after Buford left, and had moved forward in pursuit, but, finding it would be impossible to move so many men rapidly enough to overtake him, he detached Lieutenant-Colonel Tarleton with two hundred and forty dragoons and mounted infantry to continue the pursuit.

By forced marches he overtook Buford on the 28th, at Waxhaws Creek, and sent Captain Kinlock to summon him to surrender. Captain Bowyer, who was acting aide to Buford, was sent to meet Kinlock, who refused to communicate with any one but Buford. On meeting Buford and making his demands, he assured him on his word as an officer and a gentleman that Tarleton's force numbered upwards of six hundred men, half of them cavalry. The terms proposed were the same that had been given at Charleston. Buford replied, "I reject your proposal, and shall defend myself to the last extremity."

Both parties prepared for action, and fighting soon began. Buford had drawn up his forces and covered them with his wagons, but, already alarmed by the report that they were outnumbered and that they were no match for the British regulars, they were thrown into hopeless disorder by the first cavalry charge. Buford, seeing that further resistance was useless, sent Bowyer with a flag of truce, accepting the terms before offered. There are so many conflicting reports of what occurred afterwards, that it is difficult to determine which is correct.

Tarleton in his report says that while he was conversing with Bowyer under the flag, his horse was shot and fell on him. His men, seeing this violation of the flag and supposing he had been killed, attacked the rebels without order and could not be restrained.

Colonel Bowyer in his account makes no mention of Tarleton's horse having been killed, but says that, while approaching under a flag of truce, Tarleton gave the order to his men to "cut down the damn rebel," and that he only escaped under a well-directed fire from Buford.

Most authorities insist that Tarleton either paid no attention to the flag or violated it without excuse. The patriots had the most intense hatred for the British and the Tories, and lost no opportunity to annoy and harass them. This was returned tenfold, and Tarleton was only too happy to get an excuse to repay some of Sumter's and Marion's old scores. Whether an opportunity was given by the American's fancied security, or by a violation of the flag by a stray shot, the British seized it, and slaughtered without quarter one hundred and wounded one hundred and forty men. The wounded were so badly cut to pieces that they could not be moved. Colonel Buford with about one hundred men succeeded in retreating into Virginia. (See Burk's History Virginia.) Much importance has been attached to this little action, because it seemed the death-blow to the Americans in Carolina, and also on account of the brutal cruelty of the British, which was avenged at the battle of King's Mountain, where the watchword, "Buford's quarter," fired the hearts of the patriots to such glorious deeds.

Virginia records are meager, both in Washington and in Virginia, almost everything having been destroyed by fire or during the late war. The records in Washington are those on file in the War Department and at the Pension Bureau.

Those in Virginia consist entirely of one small manuscript book of records of the Virginia Militia, 1777–1778, still kept in the state library, and a short printed list of soldiers and sailors.
At Yorktown there was but one battalion of Virginia Continental troops; the others had been mustered out or merged into the militia, and had done glorious service throughout Cornwallis' campaign, following him to Yorktown and participating in that siege under Nelson, mustering fifteen hundred men. Colonel Buford, February 12, 1781, was made colonel of the Third Virginia, and served in that capacity until the close of the war. When mustered out he received warrants for bounty lands for nearly six years' service. He bought the warrants of his brother Thomas, who was killed in 1774, at the battle of Point Pleasant. Together these warrants were for nearly fifteen thousand acres of land. With little but these he went to Kentucky in 1783, accompanied by his nephew, John, son of James Buford. He secured the position of deputy surveyor, and at once began to locate his land grants, some of these on the Ohio River, in Kentucky, and some in Ohio, but the most valuable in the very heart of what is now the blue grass country, in Fayette and Woodford Counties. He settled first on Dick's River, in the "Bent." The McDowells settled in Danville. He had been with Captain Samuel McDowell at Point Pleasant, and in Kentucky they were neighbors. Here he met and married Martha, the daughter of his old friend and companion in arms, and in July, 1792, they moved to Woodford County, and settled near Georgetown, now Scott County.
they spent the rest of their lives. He was a man of most sterling qualities, every impulse upright, honest, and straightforward, firm, yet loving and most lovable. His character was moulded and his mind cultivated by associations, during the stirring times of the Revolution, with the first men of the country. His attainments were rare, and fitted him as well for civil pursuits as he had been for military.

He became the head of the house in Kentucky, and his home was the headquarters and rendezvous not only for his own people, but for all Kentuckians. He devoted himself to building up the state from a wilderness. His home grew into a magnificent estate, in the very heart of Kentucky's most beautiful country. Amidst these pleasing surroundings there were many troubles,—money was scarce, land matters so muddled that no titles were safe, lawsuits, and other people's worries. His letters during this time contained no bitterness, no bickering, and no expressions of hard feeling, but are businesslike and considerate. His last days were happy and quiet, spent amidst surroundings he loved to feel he had made. With a beautiful and charming wife, noble sons, and an idolized daughter, he could say, with pride, “I have fought a good fight.” He gave his sons splendid estates in his own neighborhood, and to his only daughter the homestead.

Abraham Buford died June 30, 1833.
McDOWELL.

1. Ephraim, first emigrant, was born in the north of Ireland, of Scotch parents; was conspicuous when a youth of sixteen in the defense of Londonderry, in 1688. He married Margaret Irwin, his first cousin. They came to America in 1729, landing at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, after the birth of their children. They first settled in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, but after a few years, in the autumn of 1737, moved to Augusta County, Virginia, and were amongst the first settlers of the Burden Grant. Children—Mary E., born 1712; John, 1714; Margaretta, who married James Mitchell, and James.

2. Mary E., daughter of Ephraim and Margaret I. McDowell, married, in Pennsylvania, 1736, James Greenlee. She died in Rockbridge County, Virginia, 1811. Mary Greenlee, sister of James, above, lived to be one hundred years of age, and was by many of the superstitious Scotch-Irish believed to be a witch. At a very advanced age she still rode much of the time on horseback.

2. John (Captain), son of Ephraim and Margaret I. McDowell, married, in Pennsylvania, in 1734, Magdalen Woods, whose mother was of the James Campbell Clan, in the service of the Duke of Argyle; her father, Michael, Sr., was a son of John Woods, of County Meath, Ireland, whose wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Worsop, and a descendant of Adam Loftus, Lord High Chancellor of Ireland during Queen Elizabeth's reign. Michael Woods, Sr., was one of the first emigrants to acquire land in Albermarle County. He crossed the mountains at Woods' (now Jarman's) Gap, June 10, 1737. He patented and purchased large tracts of land at the headwaters of the Mechanics River, including the Gap, and on Ivy Creek, in what is now Albermarle County. He died in 1762.
Children of John and Magdalen W. McDowell—Samuel, born in Pennsylvania October 29, 1735; James, 1739, married Elizabeth Cloyd; he died 1771, she died 1810, and Sarah, married George Moffitt. John was killed December 25, 1742, at Balcony Falls, Virginia, while in pursuit of a band of marauding Indians. Magdalen married, second, Benjamin Burden, son of the Grantee. After his death she married, third, Colonel Bayle (or Boyle?). She lived to be one hundred and four years of age.

3. Samuel, son of Captain John and Magdalen W. McDowell, married, January 17, 1754, in Rockbridge County, Mary McClung. (See below.) He served as private soldier in Captain Samuel Lewis' company at Braddock's defeat. Was a member of the House of Burgesses from Augusta County, 1765, was captain of a company from that county in Dunmore's War, 1774, and was under Captain Andrew Lewis at Point Pleasant, and, with Colonel Field, of the Culpeper men, turned defeat into a brilliant victory. Was colonel of a regiment of militia from Augusta County during the Revolutionary War, and participated in General Jones North Carolina campaign; did most gallant service at Guilford Court House. During the same time he was a member of the House of Burgesses from Augusta and Rockbridge Counties. Chosen a member for Augusta to the first congress, to meet at Richmond, March 20, 1775. Was a member of the convention which met at Williamsburg to declare the United Colonies free and independent states, afterwards a member of the state council. In 1783 appointed surveyor of public lands in Fayette County, Kentucky. Was assistant judge of the first district court held in Kentucky, at Harrodsburg, March 17, 1783. Moved to what is now Mercer County, 1784. Was one of the presiding judges at the first county court held in the Kentucky district; henceforth he was known as Judge Samuel. Children—

4. Magdalen and Sarah, twins, born October 9, 1755. Magdalen married Andrew Ried; Sarah married Caleb Wallace.

4. John (Major), born December 7, 1757, married his first cousin, Sarah, daughter of James McDowell, who died, and he married, second, Lucy Legrand; their son, Dr. Nashe, married a daughter of Dr. Daniel Drake, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

4. James (Colonel), born April 29, 1760, married Mary (Polly) Paxton Lyle, and settled near Lexington, Kentucky. Their daughter, Isabella, married Dr. John P. Campbell, whose daughter, Margaret Madison, married Dr. Thomas, Jr., son of Colonel John Pickett.

4. William (Judge), born March 9, 1762, married Margaretta Madison, niece of President Madison, and settled in Bowling Green, Kentucky.

4. Martha, born January 20, 1766, married Colonel Abraham Buford. (See Abraham, of John and Judith.)

4. Joseph, September 13, 1768, married Sarah Irvin, born March 12, 1773. (Sister of Ann, wife of Samuel.) Children—Anne, married Abraham Caldwell; Charles; Sarah, married Michael Sullivant; Margaret, married Joseph Sullivant; Caleb; Magdalen, married Caleb Wallace.

4. Ephraim 2d (Dr.), the distinguished surgeon, born November 11, 1771, married Sarah, daughter of Governor Isaac Shelby.

4. Caleb, born April 17, 1774, married his cousin, Betsy, daughter of Joseph McDowell.

McCLUNG.

1. William McClung was born in Ireland, married Elizabeth Rhea, settled in Virginia, 1745. His sister Margaret married Alexander Humphrey.

2. John, of Timber Ridge, born in Ireland, 1731, married Elizabeth, daughter of Archibald and Margaret Parke Alexander, went to Rockbridge County, 1747. ALEXANDER.

1. Archibald Alexander, Sr., of Manor Cunningham, County Donegal, Scotland, descended from the house of McAlexander, Tarber and Knityre, son—
MARTHA MCDOWELL BUFORD
2. William, had four sons, Archibald, Jr., William, Jr., Robert, and Peter.

3. Archibald, Jr., son of William, born at Manor Cunningham, February 4, 1708, married, December 31, 1734, his cousin, Margaret, daughter of Joseph Parke, of County Donegal. Archibald, Jr., came to America with his brother Robert in 1736. Settled in New Providence, Pennsylvania, in 1747. He moved to Rockbridge County, Virginia, his brother Robert having preceded him. He was a captain in the "Sandy Creek Voyage" against the Indians in 1756, one of the first magistrates in the county and the first sheriff. Children—Elizabeth, born in Scotland, October 28, 1735; William, 1737; Anne, September 17, 1740; Joseph, February 9, 1742; Hannah, April 21, 1745; Phoebe, August 12, 1749. Margaret Parke Alexander died July, 1753.

4. Elizabeth, daughter of Archibald and Margaret Parke Alexander, married John McClung. (See, above, John.)

MARTHA McDOWELL BUFORD was a fitting wife for her husband. Reared amidst the thrilling scenes of border life, she grew up self-reliant, helpful, and strong, mentally and physically, with that innate refinement that comes only from a long line of noble ancestors. Her letters, many of which the writer has been fortunate enough to get possession of, are indicative of great character. They are full of tenderness, and discuss politics, religion, and family matters, expressed with the quaint old-fashioned elegance of a noble woman. She mentions with much pride that her son Charles had just returned from the East, where he met and dined with President Adams, and of William having returned from Yale, and of his marriage, and says, "We think his wife most amiable." Her last days were full of happiness and comfort. She was always thrifty and energetic and devotedly religious, being a Presbyterian by inheritance from her Scotch-Irish ancestors. When no longer able to get about, she sat knitting, with her Bible in her lap, which she read through three times a year. She died July 6, 1835.

The early settlers of Kentucky brought with them their family customs and traditions, and their homes had no counterpart elsewhere, except in Virginia and in England. They were clannish, loved their people, and were nothing if not hospitable; their farms grew into great estates, with beautiful pastures filled with the finest stock in America, and well-cultivated fields of grain and hemp.

7. CHARLES, son of Colonel Abraham and Martha McDowell Buford, married Henrietta Adair, daughter of Governor John Adair, of Kentucky, born in South Carolina, 1757, died May 19, 1830. Children—Henry, born October, 1822; Martha, born 1824. Henrietta A. Buford died, and Charles married, January 20, 1835, Lucy Ann Duke, who was born January 11, 1814. Children—Basil Duke, born December 11, 1835, died May 23, 1891; Charles, Jr., November 18, 1837; Louis Marshall, November 6, 1839; Charlotte, November 6, 1841; Susan McClung, July 20, 1844; Henrietta, June 27, 1847; Lucy, June 22, 1849; Blanche, December 15, 1851; Agatha, 1852-1853, died, 1861; George, October 1, 1856.

Charles Buford was a graduate of Yale, a man of genius, literary and mechanical, sweet-tempered like his father, with a charming and refined manner. After marrying he settled near Georgetown, Scott County, Kentucky, in the neighborhood of his father's homestead. He married a second time while living here, and here were born his children. In 1854 or 1856 he tired of farming and of country life and moved to Rock Island, Illinois, where he engaged in coal mining and manufacturing, accumulating a large fortune.

Charles Buford died January 4, 1866.

Lucy Ann Duke Buford died July 8, 1895.

Henry Buford died 1848.

Bettie M. Buford died 1896.

(See Mary, of Samuel McDowell.)

9. HENRY MARSHALL BUFORD when twelve years of age entered Centre College, where he graduated in 1864, receiving the highest honors of his class. He studied law with Garrett Davis, of Paris, and attended Harvard law school, from which he graduated in 1866. In 1867 he began the practise of law in Lexington, and soon took rank as one of the brightest young lawyers of the blue grass capital. For nearly thirty years he continued to practise here, and once or twice during this time he held office. He was master commissioner of the Circuit Court from 1877 to 1880, and was judge of Common Pleas Court from August, 1886, to August, 1890. Judge Buford was elected city solicitor of Lexington in 1895. His father, Henry Buford, was a native of Scott County, removing to Fayette County after his maturity, where he made his home until his death, in 1849. His mother, Betty Marshall Buford, was a native of Mason County.

Henry Marshall Buford died May 25, 1897.

James S. Jackson born September 27, 1823, graduated from Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, studied law at Transylvania University, and began practise in 1845. In his twenty-fourth year he was chosen captain of the Lexington company, of Marshall's regiment, for the Mexican War. Finding that his friend, Cassius M. Clay, was about to be left out of the service, by General Owsley's refusal to appoint him a colonel, Jackson resigned his captaincy that Clay might be chosen in his place, and served under him as a private. While in Mexico, serving as a lieutenant, he became involved in a quarrel with Colonel Thomas Marshall, which resulted in a duel. Jackson resigned from the service to escape trial by court-martial. He resumed the practise of law, in Hopkinsville, Kentucky. He was an emancipationist, but was, in 1857, elected to the Legislature from Christian County, one of the largest slave-holding counties in the state. He was defeated for Congress in 1859, but was elected in 1861; served with distinction the first session, and left his seat to go to the front as colonel of the 3d Kentucky Cavalry, and was with Buell in his campaigns in Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, and Alabama. For his arduous and efficient service he was promoted to brigadier-general, and fell, at the head of his command, at Perryville, October 8, 1862.

Charles Buford, Jr., died June 7, 1870.

8. LOUIS MARSHALL, son of Charles and Lucy Ann Duke Buford, married, at Cincinnati, Ohio, January 22, 1873, Mary L. Slevin, who was born October 22, 1842. Children, all born at Rock Island, Illinois— Anne, born November 27, 1873; Charlotte, August 29, 1875, died February 22, 1882; Teresa, August 29, 1875.
died March 27, 1877; Charles S., September 30, 1876; Louis Marshall, May 20, 1878; May L., February 6, 1880, died April 5, 1880; Basil Duke 2d, May 6, 1881; John T., March 27, 1883, died December 5, 1887.

Louis M. Buford served during the Civil War as major on the staff of General James S. Jackson until his death, after that on the staff of General Thomas L. Crittenden. He was United States Consul at El Paso, Mexico, during President Cleveland’s administration. He resides in El Paso, Mexico.

9. ANNE, daughter of Louis M. and Mary S. Buford, married, March 1, 1897, James Wiley Magoffin.

8. GEORGE, son of Charles and Lucy Ann Duke Buford, married, November 10, 1885, Fannie L. Christopher, who was born August 12, 1860. Children—Kenneth McDowell, born November 13, 1886, Hiram Christopher, November 6, 1891.

7. WILLIAM McDOWELL, son of Colonel Abraham and Martha McDowell Buford, married, at Lancaster, Kentucky, April 17, 1828, Margaret Eliza, born January 25, 1811, daughter of George and Eleanor Bainbridge Robertson. Children—Martha McDowell, born July 4, 1829; George Robertson, February 11, 1831, died September 8, 1832; Eleanor McIntosh, September 2, 1835; Charles Alexander, September 9, 1837; Mary Katherine, August 31, 1839; William Robertson, April 3, 1842; Marcus Bainbridge, July 10, 1844; Margaret Elizabeth, November 19, 1846; Mary Duke, December 7, 1850.

William McDowell Buford died at Elkwood, Woodford County, Kentucky, August 15, 1867. Margaret E. R. Buford died at Elkwood, January 27, 1879.

William McDowell (Scott) Buford had a charming personality, being much like his handsome father in appearance and inheriting the lovable and gentle manner of his mother. As a young man, the costume of the day,—knee-breeches, dress coat, and dainty ruffles,—lent a grace to his stately bearing, and he attracted favorable attention wherever he appeared. He spent three years at Yale, and on his return studied law with his future father-in-law, Judge Robertson, at Lancaster, Kentucky.
It was there he met and married Margaret Eliza Robertson. He never practised law, as every instinct led him to follow in the footsteps of his ancestors, who had loved lands and beautiful stock.

After his marriage they first lived on a farm in Franklin County, near the old Harmony church. Here their first two children were born, but it was far from their old homes, and they found it lonely and uninviting. After his father's death, 1834 or 1835, he bought a large tract of land in Woodford County, near Midway. This he made into a beautiful home, building a residence then palatial, which he named "Elkwood," from the Elkhorn Creek, which almost surrounded the property. Here all their other children were born and reared midst surroundings almost feudal. "Elkwood" was in the heart of the blue grass country, and after his home was finished he devoted himself to farming, stock-raising, and the importing and breeding of race-horses. Here were raised some of Kentucky’s most celebrated thoroughbreds, among them Minstrel, Melody, Mollie Jackson, Laura Farris, and the queen of all, Idlewild. Horse-racing (at that time confined to Virginia and Kentucky) was never profitable; gentlemen bred and raised fine horses for the improvement of stock and for their own pleasure.

During the trying times before and during the Civil War he was a staunch Unionist, and his three sons were in the army and navy, while his two sons-in-law were in the Southern army. A peculiar state of affairs existed, for a new set of people had sprung up who were so aggressively loyal that the safety of many of his old friends (Southern sympathizers) was menaced. Feeling that the second commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," was indeed as binding as the first, he drew around these the circle of his loving influence, and all joined forces when it became necessary to protect themselves against guerillas and home guards.

He quietly accepted the emancipation of his slaves, feeling solicitude for them only; many of them never left their home, and those who did went sorrowfully to worse slavery and degradation. He was a man of true grit, tempered with the greatest discretion, a leader among his people, commanding love and respect. William Buford, son of Simeon, was his neighbor; in contradistinction William McDowell was called "Scott Billy," and he adopted Scott as his middle name; the other William was known as "Colonel Billy."

Margaret Eliza Buford was a woman of remarkably strong characteristics. Born of Scotch-Irish ancestors, she inherited their noble qualities of thrift, indomitable energy, and thoughtfulness for others. Self-reliant, but thoroughly unselfish and courageous, she dominated her home by love and tenderness. She raised a large family, who, none of them, ever became quite accustomed to being from under her wing. She survived her husband, and, although everything except the homestead had gone with the war, she managed the farm successfully until her death.

See, below, Robertson and McIntosh.

ROBERTSON.

James 1st was of Scotch descent, emigrated to America in 1737 with a colony of Scotch-Irish, Presbyterians from Coleraine, north of Ireland, and settled in the Burden Tract, in the then Alleghanian wilderness of Virginia, about one mile northwest of Staunton.

Among the settlers were the Alexanders, McDowells, McClungs, McKees, and many other well-known families, who have scattered over Virginia, Kentucky, the South, and the West, and have intermarried so frequently that many of the present generation are descendants of them all.

This Burden Tract was a grant of land made by Governor Gooch to one Burden, an agent of Lord Fairfax. The pioneer of this part of the then unknown world was John Salling. In 1735 John Lewis and John Mackey, under the guidance of Salling, went as far west as the Salt Licks. They all three settled subsequently near the forks of the James River. Burden visited Lewis at his home, and while there captured a Buffalo calf. This he brought back and presented to Governor Gooch, who was so much pleased that he authorized Burden to locate five hundred thousand acres of land in the vast territory then known as Frederick and Augusta Counties, on the condition that he should, within ten years, settle one hundred families thereon, in which case he should be entitled to one thousand acres adjoining each home, with the right to enter as much more at one shilling per acre. In order to comply with the terms of the agreement Burden visited England, and in 1737 brought from the north of Ireland, from Scotland, and from the border counties of England, upwards of one hundred settlers.

The Burden Grant was originally owned by Burden, William Robertson, Governor Gooch, and others; finally Burden became assignee of the others, and obtained patent November 8, 1739. The first settler was Ephraim McDowell. A Presbyterian church was organized and the Reverend John Brown called in 1753. Among the signers of the call were Robert Robertson, John, James, Matthew, and William Robinson. William was probably the father of Margaret, wife of Alexander Robertson (see below), Waddells, Augusta County. (Foote's "Virginia Sketches."

2. James, Jr., son of James 1st, was born in Ireland, came to America with his father, and married, in Augusta County, Virginia, 1739, Elizabeth Crawford. Children—Jane, born December 23, 1740; Ann; May, 1742; George, March, 1744; Elizabeth, January, 1746; Alexander, November 22, 1748; Rebecca, July 23, 1751. James Robertson, Jr., died in 1758.

3. George, son of James, Jr., and Elizabeth Crawford Robertson, married Jane ———, lived in Botetourt County in 1777. George C., who was colonel of militia in 1814, is supposed to have been his son.

A James Robertson was one of the justices of the county court in 1770–76; he is probably the same as mentioned as a soldier in the Revolution, died December 25, 1835, aged eighty-five. William Robertson was chosen October 21, 1775, ensign or lieutenant of the 2d Virginia regiment, called into service July, 1775, and resigned 1776, became adjutant of the 9th Virginia May 22, 1777, transferred to the 1st Virginia September 14, 1778. He was in the battles of Great Bridge, Brandywine, and Germantown, was taken prisoner at Charleston May 12, 1780, released same year, rejoined the army and served to the close of the war, transferred to the 5th Virginia February 12, 1781, and died November 12, 1831. His only child, daughter, married Chas. A. Stewart, of Greenbrier County, Virginia, who, with her sons, William Robertson Stewart and John, succeeded to his property.

3. Elizabeth, daughter of James, Jr., and Elizabeth Crawford Robertson, married Mr. Kerr. Children—James, and several others. Two brothers went to Pennsylvania, another brother remained in Augusta, Virginia, and has descendants living there.

ried ———. Children—Eliza, who married a Mr. Thomas, had one son; Edward Thomas, who had a son. Claude, United States Consul, Marseilles, France; John, who has a son, William, married, and has several children; Katherine, married Colonel Clarke, has one son, Ray.

3. Alexander, son of James, Jr., and Elizabeth Crawford Robertson, was born in Augusta County, Virginia, November 22, 1748, married, at the residence of Colonel John Howard, Bedford County, Virginia, August 18, 1773, Margaret (born April 13, 1755), daughter of William Robinson, of English descent, born in the county of Down, North Ireland. James Robinson, the father of William, came to America about 1740 and settled in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. William married Margaret Garrol (Gerrol), and moved to the last crossing of the Roanoke River, near Voss Fort, then in the county of Fincastle, Virginia. After the birth of their daughter, Margaret, in Botetout, now Montgomery County, they settled on a tract of land called "Fotheringay," or "Hancock Place." William Robinson was drowned in New River in 1765. Alexander and Margaret R. Robertson settled, in 1774, at Dunker's Bottom, on New River, about twenty miles above English's Ferry, where they lived until the latter part of 1779, when they emigrated, with a colony, to Gordon's Station, about four miles north of Harrodsburg, Kentucky, arriving there December 24, 1779. They brought with them their three eldest children, who were born in Virginia. Their cabin was near the road which now leads from Danville to Lexington, and by the mouth of Dick's River. Alexander Robertson was a member of the Virginia Legislature 1788-89, member of the Virginia convention which ratified the Constitution of the United States in 1788. He built the first handsome residence in the state of Kentucky, at Harlan Spring, on Cane Run, Garrard County, in 1792. He was appointed justice of the first Kentucky Circuit Court held in Lincoln County in 1783, also justice of the first court held in Mercer County in 1786. He was sheriff of Mercer County 1792. He died August 15, 1802, and his widow, Margaret, married, in 1805, Job Johnson, and moved to Lancaster, Kentucky, 1806. Job Johnson died 1826. Margaret died in Frankfort, Kentucky, January 13, 1846. The children of Alexander and Margaret R. Robertson were Elizabeth, Margaret, Jane, Martha, James 3d, Alexander, Jr., George, and Charlotte.

6. Mina, daughter of Gelon and Sarah H. Rout, married Mr. Simmington. Daughter—Frances. Both Mr. and Mrs. Simmington died. Gelon Rout died, and Sarah married, second, John Talbot. Children—John, Jr., and ______.

John Talbot, United States Navy, was drowned November 29, 1870.

Lieutenant Talbot was a man of remarkably handsome personal appearance and was a great favorite in the navy. His promotion was rapid. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1866, was commissioned ensign in 1868, master in 1869, and a lieutenant in 1870. He was twenty-six years old at the time of his death. On the 29th of October, 1870, the United States man-of-war Saginaw was wrecked near Ocean Island, in the Pacific Ocean, and all of her officers and men cast on its barren and uninhabited shores. Ocean Island was midway between San Francisco and Yokohama, entirely out of the customary track of navigation, and fully fifteen hundred miles from the nearest civilized port. The crew of the Saginaw was therefore in a terrible plight. Only a scanty store of provisions had been saved from the wreck, the sand bank yielded nothing that was nourishing, and the chances of the crew being saved by a passing craft were about as remote as the possibility of the Pacific returning the wrecked ship intact. A call was made for volunteers to undertake a voyage of fifteen hundred miles in a small boat, the captain's gig, to procure relief before the men should perish from starvation and exposure. Lieutenant Talbot and five seamen volunteered to make the journey, with Honolulu as their objective point. Talbot and the men under him began their trip with meager provisions, some of them considerably damaged and practically useless, insufficient fresh water, and a small oil cooking-stove.

After having been five days out, the little company encountered storms and lost all means of procuring light or fire. Then commenced many days of suffering from exposure and want of food which was not positively sickening. Lieutenant Talbot fell ill and remained so, and then, to add to the horrors of the situation, one of the seamen became insane. Thus the gig and the heroic crew drifted for thirty-one days, Talbot at times almost exhausted, but always courageous and cheerful, keeping up the hopes of his comrades, and navigating the little craft in an intelligent manner. Finally the boat, leaky and dangerous, with Talbot and two of the men extremely ill, and another insane, but harmless, sighted the coast of Kauai, one of the Hawaiian group. It was here that Talbot met his death in trying to land. The boat was capsized in the surf, and every man save one, Talbot included, was washed into the sea. Talbot, heavily clothed and much exhausted, made a desperate effort to save himself, but a breaker carried him away. He sank without a cry. One Halford, the sole survivor, clung to the boat and was washed ashore. He told his story, and in a short time a vessel was on its way to Ocean Island to rescue the shipwrecked seamen. Talbot's body was afterward found on the beach and given a temporary burial. Later it was brought to Danville and finally interred. A modest stone tells in a few words the story of his heroism.

His classmates honored his memory by inserting in the wall of the chapel at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, a tablet, and the Navy Department named torpedo-boat No. 15, Talbot.

5. Alexander, son of John and Jane R. Haun, married Leonora McCurdy. Children—Louise, Robert, Jane, Leonora, John, Gelon, Elisha (dead), and Susan.

Leonora, daughter of Alexander and Leonora Hann, married Charles Talbot. Children—Finley, Elizabeth, Eliza, John, Ellen, Louise, Addison, Charles, Jr., and Leonora.

6. John, son of Alexander and Leonora Hann, married Mary Robinson. They have several children.

6. Gelon, son of Alexander and Leonora Hann, married, and has several children.

4. Martha (Patsy), daughter of Alexander and Margaret R. Robertson, born July 9, 1788, married Honorable Samuel McKee, born October 13, 1774, in Rockbridge County, Virginia. He was the son of Colonel William McKee, born in County Down, Ireland, 1732, who came to America when six years of age with his father, Robert, the pioneer. Samuel McKee went to Kentucky in 1790, settled at Lancaster, was a lawyer, member of Congress 1809-17, circuit judge, United States district judge, member of Kentucky Legislature, member of a commission appointed by President Monroe to clear the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers of obstructions. Children—William Robertson, born September 29, 1808; George Robertson, May 27, 1810; Alexander Robertson, February 4, 1816; Jane Logan, August 23, 1818. Honorable Samuel McKee died October 16, 1826. Martha Robertson McKee died April 14, 1848.

5. William Robertson, son of William and Martha Robertson McKee, married, at West Alexander, Pennsylvania, April 27, 1836, Jane Wilson (who was the granddaughter of the Reverend Colin McFarqahar, pastor of the Donegal church during the Revolutionary War). Children—Martha Robertson, born August 2, 1837; George Wilson, March 29, 1842; Hugh Wilson, April 23, 1844.

William Robertson McKee was a cadet at the United States Military Academy July, 1825, to July, 1829, brevet second lieutenant, and second lieutenant 3d artillery, July 1, 1829; Fort Preble, Maine, 1829-1833; first lieutenant 3d artillery August 13, 1836, and in the operations in the Creek Nations 1836. He resigned September 15, 1836. He was assistant engineer of the Charlestown, Louisville, and Cincinnati Projected Railroad 1836-1838, counselor at law at Lexington, Kentucky, 1838-44, chief engineer of the Frankfort and Lexington, Kentucky, Railroad 1844-46. June 6, 1846, he was elected colonel of the second regiment Kentucky volunteers, and served in the Mexican War 1846-47, and was killed at the battle of Buena Vista February 23, 1847. Jane Wilson McKee was a woman of sunny disposition, was charming and lovable, and possessed great talent. Her life was clouded with sorrow, both her husband and younger son having been killed in battle. She died at the home of her son, Major George Wilson McKee, United States Army, at the Allegheny Arsenal, Pennsylvania, September 9, 1888, aged seventy-six.

6. Martha Robertson, daughter of William Robertson and Jane Wilson McKee, married, March 12, 1856, George Wilson McKee was appointed to the United States Military Academy in 1858, graduated 1863, served during the war with distinction in the Ordnance Corps, and after the war at Watervliet, Springfield, Washington, Benicia, Rock Island, Allegheny, and Frankfort Arsenals. At the time of his death, March 30, 1891, he was in command of the Frankfort Arsenal, Pennsylvania.

6. Hugh Wilson, son of William Robertson and Jane Wilson McKee, was appointed to the United States Naval Academy in 1861; he graduated in 1866. He served in the European and Asiatic squadrons. He was killed June 11, 1871, at the storming of the citadel of Fort McKee, Kang Hoa Island, Corea. At that time he was a lieutenant on board the United States flagship Colorado, Admiral John Rodgers, and commanded a company from the ship in the attack. "The heroic McKee was the first man to mount the parapet. There he stood for a moment, bravely fighting single-handed against overwhelming odds, and at last fell, pierced by both spear and bullet. Thus did the son follow the glorious example of the father, and like him die fighting at the head of his men."*

At Buena Vista won,
Though twice the setting sun
Would doubt, his father charged and saved the day;
And both for this fair land
Fell fighting, sword in hand.
O Alma Mater, nourish such as they!

His classmates erected a tablet to his memory in the chapel at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, and the Navy Department named torpedo-boat No. 18 for him.

5. George Robertson McKee, son of Honorable Samuel and Martha R. McKee, married, first, Maria Cook, of Lancaster County, Kentucky. They had one son, Samuel, born July 3, 1835. He was in the Union Army during the Civil War, and was undoubtedly killed, as he never returned to Kentucky. George R. McKee married for second wife, October 5, 1843, Sarah H. Wingate, of Frankfort, Kentucky. Children—Lucien W., August 28, 1847, died September 24, 1867; Jeanie Duncan, July 18, 1849.

George R. McKee was a man of very high order of ability, great learning, unwavering fidelity, spotless integrity, and undaunted courage. As a lawyer he stood in the front rank of a bar that had no superior in the United States. In 1844 Governor Letcher appointed him judge of the Circuit Court for what was then known as the Upper District, adjoining Virginia. He was repeatedly a member of the General Assembly of Kentucky, was a resident of Covington, where he died May 12, 1889.

Dr. Alexander R. McKee died February 13, 1886. He was a graduate of the Philadelphia Medical College. He practised his profession in Madison, Garrard, and Boyle Counties, and resided in Danville, Kentucky.

Mary Ashby McKee died September 15, 1901.

Alexander R. McKee, Jr., died March 27, 1890.

5. Jane Logan, daughter of Honorable Samuel and Martha R. McKee, married, June 18, 1841, Dr. Benjamin F. Duncan, of Lancaster County, Kentucky. Children—Patsy McKee, July 31, 1842; John, April 20, 1844; Margaret Robertson, January 1, 1846; Charlotte Letcher, May 12, 1847; William McKee, May 19, 1849; Benjamin F., August 1, 1852, died April 13, 1879; James, January 27, 1855; Jeanie L., March 20, 1857; Samuel McKee, June 19, 1859; Eleanor Robertson, December 29, 1861.

Dr. Benjamin F. Duncan was born in Lincoln County, Kentucky, July 2, 1808, and died at the old McKee homestead, near Lancaster, August 14, 1865.

Jane Logan McKee Duncan died December 13, 1872.

6. Margaret Robertson, daughter of Benjamin F. and Jane L. McKee Duncan, born 1846, married W. O. Bradley, ex-governor of Kentucky. Children—George Robertson, who died young, and Christine.

7. Susan, daughter of William McKee and Alice Duncan, married Pope Rogers. One daughter—Susan.

6. Eleanor Robertson, daughter of Benjamin F. and Jane L. McKee Duncan, married Dr. William Simpson Elkin, of Atlanta, Georgia.

4. James 3d, son of Alexander and Margaret Robertson, born November 18, 1781, married Nancy Davidson, born 1784. Children—George Alexander, December 6, 1807, married Julia ——; Charlotte, married Dr. William Ely; Mary W., married John Graffen; Margaret E., married Henry Hardie; James, and William.

4. Alexander, Jr., son of Alexander and Margaret Robertson, never married. He was a captain in the War of 1812, and died at Detroit, Michigan, shortly after the war.

4. George, son of Alexander and Margaret Robertson, born November 18, 1790, married, at Lexington, Kentucky, November 28, 1809, Eleanor James McIntosh Bainbridge, who was born at Lake Seneca, New York, April 17, 1794. She was a daughter of Dr. Peter Bainbridge, of Lancaster, Kentucky (cousin of Commodore Bainbridge, U. S. Navy), and Eleanor James McIntosh, the only daughter of General Alexander McIntosh, of South Carolina. (See McIntosh.) Children—Margaret Eliza, born January 25, 1811; Eleanor McIntosh, January 28, 1813; Mary Oden Epps, May 5, 1815, died June 20, 1833; Charlotte Corday, June 14, 1817; Alexander Hamilton, March 17, 1819; Bainbridge, born December 13, 1822, died February 9, 1833; Martha Jane, born July 24, 1824, died May 17, 1826; George S. Judge George Robertson died May 16, 1874.

Eleanor Bainbridge Robertson died January 13, 1865.

JUDGE GEORGE ROBERTSON.

In 1805-1806 he was at Transylvania University; 1806-09 studying law at Lancaster, Kentucky; admitted to the bar 1811; declined appointment as register of the Land Office, St. Louis, Missouri, 1812; prosecuting attorney, Garrard County, Kentucky, and assessor of direct tax of his congressional district, 1816; elected to Congress, youngest member of the house, 1818; reelected to Congress; offered appointment as governor of Arkansas and the Mission to Columbia by President Monroe, and was appointed minister to Peru by President Adams; 1820 elected to Congress for the third time; while in Congress he was of the committees of internal improvements, of judiciary and of private land claims, and in 1820 he initiated by bill the present system of selling public lands; 1821 resumed his law practise in Lancaster; 1822 resigned his seat in Congress; declined appointment as attorney-general of Kentucky, tendered by Governor Adair, and also judgeship of Fayette District; Kentucky Legislature 1823–27; speaker of the House for three years; 1828 declined the nomination for governor of Kentucky; secretary of state and appellate judge December 16, 1829; commissioned chief justice of Kentucky, resigned April 1, 1843; professor of constitutional law, equity, and international law, Transylvania University, 1834–1848; elected to the Legislature 1848; 1851 speaker of the House; appellate judge and chief justice 1864–71. He died May 16, 1874.

"Kentucky has produced from her soil, distinguished as many of them have been in every department of life, no son whose name she will inscribe higher in her list of worthies."

McINTOSH.

The battle of Culloden, in April, 1746, led to the emigration of many families to America. Among these, who were ranked as rebels in that conflict, and afterward, were the McIntosh's. Among the ladies in custody after the battle, the laird of McIntosh's wife is mentioned, and Colonel and Ensign McIntosh were among the rebels slain.

A correspondent of the Charleston Gazette, writing from London, May 10, said, "We are assured that his majesty has been pleased to order such of the rebel private men as his royal highness shall think proper objects of his clemency be transported to some of his majesty's American colonies."

John and Alexander McIntosh, brothers, were the first of the name to settle in Carolina. In 1756 John obtained a grant of land on Black River, and went soon after to Welch Neck, on the Pedee. He married a Miss Nickell; had five sons, Alexander 2d, John, Lachlan, William, and James. Alexander, the younger of the brothers, settled on the west side of the Pedee, in Welch Neck. He married Miss James, daughter of James James, who was the leader of a Welch colony from Pennsylvania, about 1737, which settled Welch Neck. Mr. James was possessed of larger means than any of his companions, and was the most prominent individual among them. He died at "Cat Fish," November 21, 1769.

The children of Alexander and his wife were Catherine, John, and Eleanor James. Catherine married and moved away at an early period. John married and died prematurely, leaving two children, Alexander 3d and Eleanor, who married Alex Norwood, of Darlington. Eleanor James married Dr. Peter Bainbridge. They went first to Maryland, thence to Seneca Lake, New York, and from there to Lancaster, Kentucky.

Alexander McIntosh probably acquired a good property by his marriage. He subsequently amassed a large fortune, and was prominently connected with the history of South Carolina in civil and military affairs. He was of handsome and commanding presence, and far better educated than was common at that time.

By intermarriage the McIntosh's, who were Presbyterians in the mother country, became thoroughly identified with the Welch in South Carolina, who were Baptists.

Alexander was commissioned a captain in his majesty's service in 1765. In 1774 he was elected a member of the first Provincial Congress to meet in Charlestown, in January, 1775, which congress authorized the enlistment of two regiments of infantry and one of horse rangers. He was elected major of the second regiment. He was a member of the committee of observation for St. David's Parish. When Charleston was threatened in 1776, he was ordered into active service. Two regiments of infantry were raised, and he was elected lieutenant-colonel of the first. From this time he was in constant active service. In September the South Carolina regiments were mustered into the Continental Army. He was a member of the General Assembly successively, and in April, 1777, was elected a member of the Legislative Council. In December, 1777, he was elected president of the Society of Saint David, which was founded for the purpose of encouraging education, providing schools and churches. A church was built, and St. David's Parish established. In March, 1778, the state militia was divided into three brigades. He was made a brigadier-general, and appointed to command the brigade embracing the western portion of the state. This rank he held for the remainder of his life. In the latter part of 1778 he was actively engaged in Georgia. After the evacuation of Augusta he was detached to command a company of regulars and a party of militia to follow and harass the enemy. In 1778 he was elected the first senator from St. David's.

In the disposition of the troops in March, 1779, for the defense of Charleston, he, with the Fifth Continental regiment, had the redoubt on the right of the line, and was selected by Moultrie as one of the commissioners for arranging terms with the British for the surrender of the town, from which humiliating duty he begged to be excused, but was finally persuaded to act. However, before an arrangement could be made, the British abandoned the siege.

He died on the 18th of November, 1780. In every position in life this patriotic and honored citizen maintained the most exemplary character, and it was his happiness to fill every position to which he was called with fidelity and honor. As shown by his correspondence he possessed, in an eminent degree, the confidence and respect of General Moultrie. Of superior mental endowments and with a well-balanced character, possessing an ample fortune, he was enabled to exert an influence beyond most of his contemporaries in the service of his country, in which he was active and prominent from the very beginning of the struggle for liberty.

LETCHER.

1. Giles Letcher married Hannah Hughes, in the north of Ireland, both being of Welsh descent. Giles was the maiden name of his mother, she being Miss Giles, of Giles Court. The Hughes family are of great antiquity in Wales, being mentioned by Jones and other historians as being descendants of the ancient royal tribes of the kingdom. The Leache, or Letcher, family bore three crowns on their coat of arms. It is recorded in an old family record that a member of this family living in Berkshire in the time of Edward III entertained and feasted in his castle three kings at one time, the king of England, the king of France, and the king of Scots, the two latter being detained in England as prisoners. For this hospitality King Edward gave to the Leache family the right to place the three crowns on their arms. Soon after their marriage, Giles and Hannah Hughes Letcher emigrated to America. They first went to Richmond, Virginia, and afterwards moved to Goochland County, in that state. Their children were: Stephen Giles, William, John, James, and Sarah.

2. Stephen Giles, son of Giles and Hannah Hughes Letcher, married Miss Betsy Perkins. They lived for some years in Virginia, then migrated to Mercer County, Kentucky, near Harrodsburg, the oldest town in the state. DUKE.

James Keith Duke was born in Washington, Kentucky, was a graduate of Yale College, which he attended with Charles and William McDowell Buford, whose sister, Mary, he married. He studied law, but did not practise after his marriage. Mary Duke inherited the old homestead, near Georgetown, and they lived there, he devoting himself to literature and breeding and raising fine stock. He was a noted turfman, and owned many of the finest race-horses ever produced in Kentucky. Both he and his wife were noted for their hospitality, and, as their family increased, their lovely, charming daughters filled the beautiful old place with brilliant people, young and old. Dr. Louis Marshall spent his last years there. Mary Duke was a woman of very strong character, and dominated every one, but with a sweet, loving manner, which no one questioned. In after years, when her children were married, they loved to look up to her still, and in her old age she was always surrounded by her grandchildren.

Mr. Duke, like most Kentuckians, suffered by the war. He opposed secession, but did not live to see the end of the war. His wife continued to live at the homestead until she was unable longer to superintend. The last years of her life she spent in Georgetown.

James Keith Duke and Lucy Ann Buford, wife of Charles Buford, descended from Captain John Marshall, emigrant, whose son, Thomas, born in Virginia, about 1655, and died May, 1704, married Martha ———. "Captain Buford was well and widely known. His honest, outspoken nature made him a man to be remembered in social and in every-day life. He had no concealments and no disguises, but spoke out with honest independence whatever was in his thoughts. For deception, pretense, or false show he had no toleration; he was natural, and wished others to be so. He loved his broad acres, fat cattle, and blooded horses. As a farmer and breeder of fine stock, he was well known throughout the state. A lifelong success crowned his active efforts in these departments of industry, and he leaves the fruits behind him in an ample estate. No Virginia home was ever the center of more generous and bounteous hospitality than his. In the War of 1812 he was an officer, and commanded a company at Crany Island. In the late war his hand and heart were with the South and her soldiers."

9. SAMUEL F. married in Fairfax County. Colonel Mosby, in his "War Reminiscences," says of Samuel Chapman: "At the first call of his state to arms, he quit the study of divinity, and became, like Stonewall Jackson, a sort of military Calvin, singing the psalms of David as he marched into battle; his character as a soldier was more on the model of the Hebrew prophets than of the evangelist or of the Baptist, in whom he was so devout a believer." In the action at Miskel's farm, "as he rode on his predestined course, the enemy's ranks withered wherever he went. He was generally in front of everybody in a fight. To give more vigor to his blows, he was standing straight up in his stirrups, dealing them right and left, with all the theological fervor of Burley of Balfour. I doubt whether he prayed that day for the souls of those he sent over the Stygian River. I made him a captain for it."

"Sam Chapman was the brother of William H. [below], who afterwards became the lieutenant-colonel of my battalion, and who had commanded the battery which, under Longstreet's order, had shattered Fitz John Porter's corps in its assault on Jackson's line at Groveton Heights. Samuel was killed, May 29, 1863, in the action at Catletts Station, Virginia, where he did most effective service with a small howitzer. He had passed through so many fights unscathed that the men had a superstition that he was as invulnerable as the son of Thetis. His hour had come at last, and a bullet pierced the celestial armor of the soldier priest, but he fought with the rammer of his gun as he fell."

JOHNSON.

1. William ist was born in old Culpeper County, Virginia, in what is now Madison County, in 1714; married Elizabeth Cave in 1742. She was the fifth child of Benjamin Cave and Hannah Bledsoe, his wife, and was born in 1720, died in 1785. William Johnson died in 1765. They had eight children.

2. Robert, son of William and Elizabeth Cave Johnson, was born in Orange County, Virginia, July 17, 1745; married, 1770, Jemima Suggett, who was born June 29, 1753, and died at Great Crossings, Scott County, Kentucky, February 23, 1814. Robert Johnson died October 15, 1815. They had eleven children.

Colonel Robert Johnson (Robin) was one of the pioneers of Kentucky. He and his family were inmates of Bryants Station when attacked by Simon Girty, in 1782. His wife was one of the matrons who made the perilous trip to and from the spring, in the face of the Indian ambuscade, to supply water to the little garrison. His infant son, Richard M., afterwards vice-president of the United States, and famous as the slayer of Tecumseh, was rocked in his rude cradle during this siege, and his nurse, Betsy, a sister nine years old, did gallant service, with her little brother, James, seven years old, in going from place to place extinguishing the flames lighted by the Indians.

3. James, son of Colonel Robert and Jemima Suggett Johnson, was born in Orange County, Virginia, January 1, 1774; married Nancy Payne, in Fayette County, Kentucky, and died August 13, 1826. They had twelve children. James was a lieutenant-colonel in the War of 1812, and distinguished himself in the battle of the Thames; was a member of the Kentucky Legislature in 1808, a presidential elector in 1821, and a member of Congress in 1825. He was one of the wealthiest men of his day in the western country.

General William Johnson was educated at West Point Military Academy, and was one of the most prominent and influential Democrats in Scott County.

Edward Ann Buford, married Henry F. Duncan, November 9, 1876. They live in Louisville, Kentucky. No children.

8. JOHN, JR., son of John and Anne Bannister Buford, married, May 9, 1854, Martha McDowell Duke, daughter of James K. and Mary Buford Duke. (See Mary, of Abraham Buford.) Children—James Duke, born July 26, 1855, died April 5, 1874; Pattie McDowell, October 14, 1857, died July 28, 1865.

JOHN BUFORD, JR., cadet United States Military Academy July 1, 1844; brevet second lieutenant First Dragoons, July, 1848; second lieutenant Second Dragoons, February 1, 1849; first lieutenant July, 1853; regimental quartermaster 1855–58; captain March, 1859; engagement, 1855, with Sioux Indians, at Blue Water; Kansas disturbances 1856–57; major, assistant inspector-general March 12, and attached to General Pope's staff March 25, 1861; brigadier-general volunteers July 27, 1862, and command of brigade of cavalry, consisting of First Michigan, Fifth New York, First Vermont, and First West Virginia; engagements at Madison Court-house August 9, Kelley's Ford August 12, Thoroughfare Gap August 28; second battle of Manassas, August 29 and 30, in which engagement he was wounded; acting chief of cavalry, of the Army of Potomac, in the Maryland campaign; battle of South Mountain September 14, 1862; Antietam, September 17, 1862; after Antietam was succeeded by General Stoneman; was on McClellan’s staff; assigned to the command of the reserved cavalry brigade, of the Army of the Potomac, upon the completion of the cavalry organization, under Burnside, General Stoneman being made chief; was leader in nearly every cavalry engagement subsequent to this; Fredericksburg, December, 1862; Stoneman’s raids into Virginia, May, 1863; Brandy Station, Beverly Ford, Aldie, Middleburg, and Upper-ville, June, 1863; appointed major-general of volunteers July, 1863; selected the site and opened the battle of Gettysburg, July 1, 1863; checked Hill’s corps for four hours with a small force of worn-out cavalry until relieved by Reynolds. John Buford said of this battle, “A heavy task was before us. We were equal to it, and shall remember with pride that at Gettysburg we did our country much service.”

He did splendid service July 2 at Wolf’s Hill and Round Top; pursued the Confederates to Warrenton, Virginia, engaging them at Culpeper, and across the Rapidan, and cut his way back to the army, north of the Rappahannock. In October he covered the rear of Meade’s army during a retrograde movement; was in an endless number of smaller engagements; assigned to command the cavalry of the Army of the Cumberland.
Before assuming command he was taken ill, suffering from an old wound received at the second battle of Manassas, and, worn out with three years' constant and arduous service, he died at Washington, District of Columbia, December 16, 1863, the date of his commission as major-general, which he received before his death.
He was but thirty-seven years old. "A splendid officer, and one of the most successful in the service." Honored by friends and foes, the pride and hope of the cavalry arm of the service, no nobler epitaph to him can be written in the history of his country than "Old Steadfast," the name given him by his comrades, and the one his men loved to call him. He was buried at West Point, where a monument is erected to his memory. A bronze statue of him was also erected July 1, 1895, near the town of Gettysburg, on the spot where he fired the first gun of the battle. General James H. Wilson, in his address at the inauguration of the statue, pays this tribute to his memory: "Strong, courageous, and generous, as they (Bufords) were through many generations, the very flower and jewel of this family was the gentleman in whose name we are gathered here to-day."

The eloquent and admirable address delivered by General James H. Wilson at the unveiling of the Buford statue was something more than a portrayal of the distlinguishing traits of a splendid soldier. It was also a discussion of the historical question as to who deserves the credit of selecting the field for the greatest battle ever fought on this continent, or, as it has been put in other words, who "made Gettysburg possible."

This honor General Wilson ascribes unhesitatingly to General John Buford, and he makes Buford's act one not of chance but of deliberate choice, his soldierly eye taking in the full strategic value of Gettysburg field, with its commanding ridges and its excellent highways, and his resolute will determining to secure it at all hazards.
At that time Buford was in the prime of life and experience, "an ideal soldier and leader." Coming of a fighting ancestry, after his graduation at West Point, in 1848, he had plenty of service in the Dragoons. He had risen to the command of the first division of the cavalry corps, in the Army of the Potomac, and in the movements that resulted in Gettysburg was heading Meade's advance.

It was on the afternoon of June 30 that Buford, reaching Gettysburg, drove out a small force of the enemy that occupied it. His information satisfied him, late that night, that Hill's corps of Lee's army was only nine miles distant, at Cashtown, with its advance several miles nearer Gettysburg. Convinced that he was on the spot where a decisive trial of strength between the two armies could be had, with an advantage in position to the Union forces, and knowing that Reynolds, with the first and eleventh corps, was encamped only five miles away, he determined to hold his position against the enemy, and, as he grimly expressed it, "completed arrangements for entertaining him until Reynolds could reach the scene."

The testimony of Buford’s signal officer as to what occurred on the night of June 30 is rightly regarded by General Wilson as the most direct on the point in question. His report records that Buford spent some hours with Colonel Devin, and, in discussing the news brought by the latter's scouts, remarked that "the battle would be fought at that point, and he was sure it would be commenced in the morning, before the infantry could get up." The signal officer adds that "these were his own words." On Colonel Devin's replying lightly that he "would take care of all that would attack his front during the next twenty-four hours," Buford answered: "No, you won't; they will attack you in the morning, and will come booming, skirmishers three deep. The enemy must know the importance of this position, and will strain every nerve to secure it, and if we are able to hold it we will do well."

The enemy did come booming in the morning, and the tenacity with which Buford held his ground showed the importance he attached to the field. One of his brigades having been sent elsewhere, by orders, he had but two left, Gamble’s and Devin’s, and these he dismounted, sending their horses well to the rear, or concealing them, and thus giving the enemy, if possible, the impression that Meade’s infantry had come up. He had one battery of horse artillery, and this he himself posted. Most welcome was the arrival of Reynold’s advance, under Wadsworth, giving a little respite to the hard-pressed cavalrmen, while the latter, in turn, when the first corps had been shattered by the enemy’s fierce onset, were able to cover its re-formation on Cemetery Ridge by standing; as General F. A. Walker puts it, “drawn up in a line of battalions in mass as steady as if on parade.”

The Comte de Paris, in his history of the war, declares that Buford alone “selected the ground upon which unforeseen circumstances were about to bring the two armies into hostile contact. Neither Meade nor Lee had any personal knowledge of it.” Buford, proceeds this historian, did not even have time to send to Meade a description of the advantages of the position and to receive his instructions. “Knowing that Reynolds was within supporting distance of him, he boldly resolved to risk everything in order to allow the latter time to reach Gettysburg in advance of the Confederate army. This first inspiration of a cavalry officer and a true soldier decided in every respect the fate of the campaign. It was Buford who selected the battlefield where the two armies were about to measure their strength."

One interesting bit of testimony is added by the signal officer already spoken of. He had taken his station on the morning of July 1 in the cupola of the Lutheran Seminary, and, while the battle was raging, descried the corps flag of General Reynolds.

"I sent one of my men to Buford, who came up, and, looking through my glass, confirmed my report, and remarked, 'Now we can hold the place.' General Reynolds and staff came up on the gallop in advance of the corps, when I made the following communication: 'Reynolds himself will be here in five minutes; his corps is about a mile behind.' Buford returned to my station, and watched anxiously observations made through my signal telescope. When Reynolds came up, seeing Buford in the cupola, he cried out, 'What's the matter, John?' 'The devil's to pay,' said Buford upon reaching the ground. Reynolds said, 'I hope you can hold out until my corps comes up.' 'I reckon I can,' was the characteristic reply. The two officers then rode rapidly to the front."

Not many minutes later the gallant Reynolds was shot through the head, and was succeeded in command by General Howard. Buford was not destined to outlive him long. After taking part in this opening struggle of Gettysburg, he was stationed on the extreme left of the army, and on the third day of the battle was allowed to withdraw to Westminster to rest and refit. Had he lived to the end of the war, he might perhaps never have found an opportunity to perform more valuable service than that of July 1, 1863, when he held at bay for a time the Confederate advance at Gettysburg, and, as General Wilson expresses it, "successfully covered the formation of the line on the ridges against which Lee's veteran corps fought themselves to a frazzle in the two days' bloody conflict that followed." General Wilson's discussion of Buford's services at Gettysburg carries the weight that comes from the opinion of one of the greatest cavalrymen of the war and one of the most eminent of its surviving soldiers.

8. THOMAS JEFFERSON, son of John and Anne Bannister Buford, married, September 13, 1853, Grace Bowers (daughter of Henry Giles and Mary C. Bowers), who was born November 25, 1831. Children—Mary, born May 15, 1854 (died young); Sarah, April 28, 1857; John Watson, January 11, 1859; Grace, October 24, 1860 (died young); Emeline Swigert, November 6, 1862; Anna Bowers, September 2, 1864; Thomas Jefferson, Jr., March 7, 1866; James Monroe 2d, July 16, 1868 (died in infancy); James Monroe 3d, January 25, 1870 (died in infancy). Residence, Rock Island, Illinois.
BOWERS.

1. George Bowers, probably born in England, or in Wales, is mentioned in the records of the town of Scituate, Massachusetts, in 1637. In 1639 he was at Plymouth, and later of Cambridge, where his wife, Barbara, died March 25, 1644, and he married, second, Elizabeth Worthington, April 15, 1649. George died in 1656. He had six children by his two wives.

2. Benamuel, his eldest child, was admitted an inhabitant of Charlestown, November 30, 1660; married, December 9, 1653, Elizabeth Dunster, niece or cousin of President Dunster, of Harvard College. Benamuel suffered much persecution as an Anabaptist and Quaker. An interesting account of him is to be found in "Paige's History of Cambridge, Massachusetts." His will was dated October 5, 1693; was probated May 28, 1698. His wife was living as late as December 26, 1693. They had nine children.

3. Jonathan, born August 11, 1673, had banns published with Anne Sylvester, of Boston, February 11, 1695-96. He was the founder of Somerset, then part of Swansea. He first bought land in Somerset (Swansea) November 20, 1704. He was a shipbuilder, and built the first house in Somerset, which is still standing. He had a second wife, Hannah Atkins, and died in 1745. He had ten children by his two wives.

4. Henry, born November 18, 1716, lived for a time at Salem, and later at Somerset, where his fine old colonial house is still standing. He was a Quaker, like most of his relatives in Somerset. He married, first, Rebecca Taber, who died July 4, 1760, and a year later he married Mary Wouton. Their marriage certificate is in the Quaker form, and is witnessed by the entire company present. He was a ship owner and merchant, but met with heavy losses during the Revolution. His estate was inventoried at $6,000 in 1790. He had ten children.

5. William Harris, born July 22, 1756, married Martha Hall, of Middletown, Connecticut, April 4, 1789. They had four children.

6. Henry Giles, born June 19, 1790, died March 31, 1844; married, for his first wife, Lucy Warner Russel, of Middletown, Connecticut, October 30, 1811. They had eight children. She died June 22, 1825. Married, for his second wife, Ann Butler, of Northampton, June 27, 1826. She died March 28, 1827. Married, for his third wife, Mary Wells Childs, of Pittsfield, Massachusetts, February 12, 1828. They had six children—Mary Childs, born December 21, 1829; Grace (see above) born November 25, 1831.

CHILDS.

1. Richard Childs, of Barnstable, Massachusetts, married Elizabeth Crocker. Son.

2. Timothy, of Deerfield, Massachusetts, married Hannah Chapin Sheldon. Son.

3. Captain Timothy, Jr., of Deerfield, Massachusetts, married Mary Wells. Son.

4. Dr. Timothy 3d, of Pittsfield, Massachusetts, married Rachel Easton. Daughter—

5. Mary Wells (see above).

9. SARAH, daughter of Thomas Jefferson and Grace B. Buford, married, January 7, 1881, James Franklin Bell, lieutenant seventh cavalry, United States Army. He was appointed to United States Military Academy, from Kentucky, September, 1874; second lieutenant cavalry 1878; transferred to the seventh cavairy August, 1878; first lieutenant December, 1890; captain March, 1899; brigadier-general 1901; service United States volunteers, major, May, 1898; honorably discharged April, 1899; major and assistant adjutant general April, 1899; lieutenant-colonel, thirty-second United States infantry, July, 1899; declined colonel, thirty-sixth United States infantry, July, 1899; brigadier-general December, 1899; medal of honor for most distinguished gallantry in action, September 9, 1899, near Porac, Luzon, Philippine Islands, while serving as colonel of the thirty-sixth infantry, United States volunteers.

9. ANNA BOWERS, daughter of Thomas Jefferson and Grace B. Buford, married, August 17, 1886, Lieutenant Ernest Albert Garlington, seventh United States cavalry. Children—Creswell, born June 23, 1887; Buford, January 10, 1889 (died in infancy); Sally, February 3, 1890.

CONWAY—GARLINGTON.

1. Edwin Conway, of the County Wigorn, that is, the County of Worcester, England, born in 1610, came to America in 1640. In his first land grant, 1644, his name is given at Edwyn Conaway Clarke. He married Martha Ettenherd, or Eltonhead, who came to America in 1652. He died in Lancaster County, Virginia, in 1675. Son—

2. Edwin, Jr., of Lancaster County, Virginia, born 1640-44, married, 1675-80, Sarah Fleet, died August, 1698. Son—

3. Edwin 3d, born in Lancaster County, October 3, 1681, married, 1704, Anne, daughter of Colonel Joseph and Elizabeth Romney Ball, and half sister of Mary, the mother of George Washington. Edwin 3d died October 3, 1763. Daughter—

4. Elizabeth, married, May 5, 1824, Christopher Garlington, of Northumberland County, who had a grant of land in that county in 1663. Son—

6. Christopher, born May 30, 1792, married Elizabeth Aycock, of Georgia. Son (7.) Albert Christopher, married Sallie, daughter of Peter Moon, of Newberry, South Carolina. Albert was a lawyer, state senator, adjutant-general, and inspector-general, South Carolina. Son—

8. Ernest Albert, graduated at West Point in 1876; second lieutenant, seventh United States cavalry, June 15, 1876; first lieutenant June, 1876; commanded the Army Greeley Relief Expedition; captain December, 1891; major and inspector-general January, 1895; lieutenant-colonel and inspector-general July, 1898; colonel and inspector-general 1901; medal of honor for gallantry in action against Sioux Indians, on Wounded Knee Creek, South Dakota, December 29, 1890, where he was severely wounded while serving as first lieutenant, seventh cavalry.

CLARKE.

JULIAN.

1. Charles Julian, of Spottsylvania County, Virginia, married Widow Reynolds. Son—

2. Dr. John, surgeon Virginia Continental line, Revolutionary War, married Margaret Lowns (or Lounds). Son—Dr. Charles, of Franklin County, Kentucky, who married Jane Moore; daughter, Harriet.

MOORE.

Jane was a daughter of Edward Moore and Ellen McDonald, his wife (daughter of Donald McDonald).
7. WILLIAM, son of Simeon and Margaret Kirtley Buford, married, in Fayette County, Kentucky, December 31, 1801, his cousin, Frances Walker Kirtley (daughter of Frances and Elizabeth Walker Kirtley), who was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, on the banks of the Shenandoah, February 6, 1787. (See Kirtley, Frances Buford, above.) Children—Francis Kirtley, born in Bourbon County, Kentucky, January 21, 1803; Simeon 3d, born in Fayette County, Kentucky, February, 1805 (died in infancy). The others, all born at "Tree Hill," Woodford County, Kentucky, were—Margaret Kirtley, October 3, 1806; Ann Merry, December 24, 1808; William, March 22, 1811, died June 18, 1848; John 2d, March 21, 1813; Elizabeth Walker, September 17, 1815; Sinclair James, October 9, 1817, died August, 1851; Abraham, January 16, 1820; Martha and Mary (twins), June 29, 1821 (Martha died November 15, 1848, Mary died November 2, 1873); Thomas, September 18, 1824, died February 12, 1885; George Henry, May 4, 1827.

William Buford died September 18, 1848. His wife, Frances Kirtley Buford, died May 29, 1866.

William Buford was known as Colonel Billy, in contradistinction to his cousin William (also of Woodford County), the son of Colonel Abraham Buford, of Scott County, the latter being called "Scott Billy."

Colonel Billy was born in Culpeper County, Virginia, and came with his father's family to Kentucky. At the age of twenty-one he married his own cousin, Frances Walker Kirtley, also of Virginia stock, in Barren County, Kentucky. From there they moved to Woodford County in 1805. Frances was but fifteen when married. This young couple reared to maturity twelve of their thirteen children, seven sons and five daughters. Like most educated Kentuckians of that day, industrious, frugal, and thrifty, they rapidly accumulated a fine estate in the very garden of the Blue Grass country, and were able to give their children every advantage, educational and social, obtainable in the state at that interesting period. Their sterling virtues, love of home and family, affectionate attachment to friends and chivalric justice to foes, their industry, uprightness, and morality, were renewed in their children.

William Buford spent his whole life in agricultural pursuits, giving particular attention to raising fine stock on his splendid farm, which he called "Tree Hill." He left by will his entire estate to his two sons, Thomas and Henry, as executors, with the exception of a few specified legacies. As the indebtedness of the estate was large, he placed it in the hands of his two executors, who had been closely associated with him in his business affairs during the latter part of his life, giving them directions that, after the settlement and division of the estate, they should give certain portions to those of his children who had been left out of the will. The estate was managed with success, and finally adjusted, Henry selling one-half of his landed property, which included the old homestead, to Mr. Robert Alexander, a wealthy Englishman and near neighbor. The mother's dowry was given to her, and Thomas, who refused to sell his portion of the estate, made every effort to keep the homestead in the family; unfortunately this involved him in a series of lawsuits, which lasted for years, and in the end failed to accomplish his purpose, for at his mother's death the property went to Mr. Alexander, and is still in the possession of his heirs.

9. WILLIAM B., son of Joel and Margaret Twyman, married Lucy Townsend Nowlin, daughter of

9. EMILY M., daughter of Joel and Margaret Twyman, married Benjamin Eddings. Two children.

9. ELIZABETH H., daughter of Joel and Margaret Twyman, married Buford S. Nowlin, son of John S. and Adaline Buford Nowlin.

9. FRANCIS K. B., son of Joel and Margaret Twyman, married Mrs. Harvey. Three children.

9. MARY WALKER, daughter of Joel and Margaret Twyman, married William Buford. Six children. (For William Buford, see Alex, son of Abraham, son of James.)

8. ANN MERRY, daughter of William and Frances W. K. Buford, married, October 3, 1833, Caleb Wallace, of St. Peter’s Parish, Beaufort District, South Carolina. Son—Caleb Manor, born October 30, 1834. Ann Merry Wallace died, in Fayette County, Kentucky, August 20, 1884; her husband died many years before.

8. JOHN, son of William and Frances W. K.
Buford, married Elizabeth Holmes Singleton, born, 1816, in Winchester, Virginia. (See Ball, below.) He went from Kentucky to Hannibal, Missouri, in 1837; here, at the house of her sister, Mrs. McDonald, he met and married his wife; they settled on a farm near Manchester, Missouri, where they spent the rest of their lives. Children—William J., November 2, 1838; Mary Frances, February 23, 1840; Virginia, July 3, 1842; Singleton, February 3, 1845, died August 2, 1886; Marshall N., April 6, 1847; John H., August 1850. John Buford died, at St. Louis, Missouri, December 24, 1885.

9. MARY FRANCIS, daughter of John and Elizabeth H. S. Buford, married John A. McElroy, born August 4, 1841. Children—Florence, November 20, 1865; Celeste, November 3, 1867; John Singleton, October 3, 1869; Charles Beaufort, November 26, 1871; Mary Emmeline, May 12, 1874; Frances Beaufort, June 6, 1877; Ralph, December 11, 1880, died July, 1881; Frederick G., May 25, 1882, died October 6, 1891. Residence, Kirkwood, Missouri.

GENERAL ABRAHAM BUFORD was a man of enormous proportions, and his strength and endurance equaled his size. As thoroughly a son of Mars in temperament as physique, he was a born fighter, and so rigid a disciplinarian that he could not always resist the temptation to command in civil life.

At the beginning of the war, he was a farmer and stock raiser. There was too much at stake for him to go with the South, without due consideration, and he did not decide to do so until John Morgan's raid into Kentucky, in 1862.

He joined Morgan at Georgetown, and from there went South; was appointed colonel, and began at once to recruit his command. With five thousand raw recruits he joined Bragg, and covered his retreat from Perryville. On the arrival of Bragg at Knoxville, Kirby Smith ordered that the mounted men of Buford's command be dismounted, in order that their horses might be used for the artillery. Buford protested against this, and, as his protest was of no avail, gave up his command. He then reported to Jefferson Davis, in Richmond, who gave him his commission as brigadier, and ordered him to report to Pemberton, in Mississippi, by whom he was assigned to a brigade in Loring's division, consisting of three Kentucky regiments, commanded by Crossland, Thompson, and Shacklett, and one from Alabama, which brigade he commanded at the battle of Champion Hill, where Grant defeated the Confederates. After this defeat, Buford did not enter Vicksburg, but joined Joe Johnson, at Jackson, Mississippi; remained at Canton until Sherman moved out of Vicksburg, when he fell back to the Tombigbee.

In the spring of 1864 he was ordered to join Forrest, at Tupelo, Mississippi, and in May moved through Tennessee into southern Kentucky, and on to Paducah. In this campaign Buford captured enough horses to mount his command, and then fell back to Jackson, with all the plunder, and his men equipped as cavalry. From Jackson, Forrest moved to Fort Pillow, and Buford was ordered, with five hundred men, to make a feint against Columbus and Paducah, which was successfully done, stopping at these places several transports loaded with men for Fort Pillow. Paducah was garrisoned by five thousand men. General Payne was summoned to surrender, which he was near doing. Buford captured all the Federal artillery horses, and went off unmolested. He rejoined Forrest at Tupelo. Sturgis moved out of Memphis with five thousand men. Forrest met him at Tishomingo Creek, and, after a terrible battle of four hours, captured his entire command, except himself and staff. In the morning before the fight Forrest asked Buford what he thought of the situation, to which he replied, "Fight, and fight damned quick."

This was one of the most successful cavalry engagements of the war. Two months later Buford engaged General A. J. Smith, and in half an hour lost four hundred and fifty men, killed and wounded, Smith falling slowly back to Memphis. In the following spring General Wilson gave Forrest a terrible whipping at Selma, and Buford fell back, in front of the victorious army, to Columbus, Georgia. On the retreat of Hood's army from Nashville, Buford covered the retreat, engaged in a fight with a Federal major, who struck him on the head with a sword, shouting as he did so. "Surrender, you damned big rebel," and Buford's reply was to kill him instantly by a shot from his revolver.

At the close of the war, he surrendered, at Gainsville, Tennessee, then retired to his beautiful home, "Bosque Bonita," where he once more engaged in breeding and raising race-horses, naming many of them for his old army friends.

Here he lost his only child, a boy at the very threshold of manhood. Neither he nor his wife ever recovered from this terrible blow, and she died a short time after. With these sorrows came the loss of his home and all his possessions; crushed and broken by grief and age, there was no incentive to begin life again, so he ended it all by shooting himself, in Indiana, June 9, 1884.

8. THOMAS BUFORD was born at "Tree Hill," Woodford County. At the age of eighteen he was sent to Georgetown College, where he remained one year. When the Reverend Dr. L. W. Seeley, professor of languages in that institution, resigned his chair, and proceeded to open a high school in Woodford County, quite a number of students, Thomas Buford among them, refused to abandon their old preceptor, to whom they were greatly attached, and followed him to his new field of labor as a teacher. Young Buford remained with him until his education was sufficiently advanced for him to undertake the study of law, to which profession his father wished him to devote himself. However, about this time, Colonel Buford becoming physically disabled by an accident, Thomas was to a great extent withdrawn from his studies, in order to assist his father in attending to the business of the farm. Nevertheless, under the supervision of Dr. Seeley, he read many law books, together with a great deal of standard literature, poetry, etc., visiting the doctor's two or three times a week for the purpose.

Colonel William Buford, his father, died on the 18th of September, 1848 (Thomas being exactly twenty-four on that day), leaving, by his last will, his entire estate to his sons, Henry and Thomas Buford, as executors. After the adjustment of the estate, Thomas secured another farm, and devoted himself to the turf, and was most successful. Although he had been educated for a lawyer, he never practised; he was a student, and, while his mind was never well balanced, he was a good talker, genial, pleasant, and companionable, but at times inclined to seek solitude and quiet. He was never violent, but was under the greatest provocation cool and composed. He had several serious altercations, where shooting was resorted to by both parties, in which he acted in the coolest and most indifferent manner, as though he had no interest in the matter beyond self-protection. He was the very soul of grit, temperate and moderate in every respect; it is questionable if he ever provoked any of his many troubles. His later financial ventures, although at first apparently successful, were finally most disastrous, involving him in a series of lawsuits, lasting ten years, and wrecking him financially, physically, and mentally.

In 1873, hoping to pass the remainder of his life in quiet and comfort, he invested all he and his sister Mary, to whom he was devotedly attached, possessed in a tract of land in Henry County, Kentucky, the title of which was not only defective, in that it described a totally different tract of land, but was sold by a father and guardian fraudulently before his daughter and ward became of age, involving litigation, which lasted for more than five years. It would be futile to follow the ramifications of the different suits, each but adding to the confusion. During this time of mental strain, severe enough to try a sound brain, Thomas was foully shot, and nearly murdered, by a sheriff, while standing unarmed, with his hand over his heart; the shot took effect in his hand, which saved his life. His sister Mary, harassed and worn out, died, leaving him stranded in his old age, robbed of everything, no means of support, and with no confidence in man. A most exhaustive review of this celebrated case was published some years ago by a member of the Frankfort, Kentucky, bar; from his conclusions the following is quoted:—

"We desire to say here at the outset of this brief history that we have as high a respect, as profound a reverence, for the Court of Appeals, Kentucky's court of the last resort, as any man living. That august tribunal represents the supreme, enthroned majesty of all the people of this broad commonwealth, and should be honored and revered as their ever-pure and unpolluted fountain of justice and equity. But we can not, at the same time, be unmindful of the fact that the constituent members of that court, like all human characters, however perfect in integrity, however honest of intention, are liable to err in their judgments; and, after a full and deliberate investigation, we are constrained to take our stand with those prominent members of the bar who believe that in this case they did err, and, while perhaps sticking too close to the technicalities of law and precedent, did violate the eternal principles of justice and fair play between man and man, in refusing to grant any compensation or relief whatever to Thomas Buford and his sister for the large sum of money, over $20,000, they had paid for the land, while at the same time giving the land back intact to the vendors, who, at the time of the sale, and for many years afterward, were unable to make a valid title.

"For example, in their last decision, while referring to and virtually admitting the extreme 'hardships' of their decision as it would affect Buford, they proceeded to declare that the 'hardships' of that decision would be equally great on the other side, if given in favor of Buford, and would involve the lives and fortunes of a widow and several helpless children, the main reason for saddling all the hardship on Buford seeming to be that he was a man, while his antagonists in the suit were a woman and her young children. Now, just here it would occur to the common mind, not too much burdened with written laws and musty precedents, that a more just and equitable solution of the question ought to have suggested itself to the court, as it does to most outsiders, in the propriety of an equal division of the 'hardships' of the decision between the two sets of litigants: some of the best lawyers and jurists in Kentucky think that even this would have fallen far short of full justice to Buford.

"The confirmatory deeds, made five and a half years after the first sale of the land, referred for boundary to the first deeds, neither of which covered one foot of the land pretended to be conveyed as aforesaid. Hence, even after the confirmatory deeds, the title passed to the Buford's was no better than it was in the beginning.

"How the learned judges of the Court of Appeals could have overlooked, or ignored utterly, as they seem to have done, this startling, decisive, and perfectly unanswerable point in favor of Buford's cause, passeth all understanding. Those judges, however, it must be remembered, have a perfect multitude of causes constantly before them, all pressing for immediate decision, and it is but reasonable to suppose, judges being human, after all, that they may sometimes overlook or fail to give due weight to the leading and controlling points in a case, whether of law or of fact. At any rate, something of the kind seems to have happened in this case. Any one can easily understand what must have been the effect of such a protracted case of warmly-contested litigation on a mind constituted, or, rather, hereditarily and chronically disorganized, like that of Thomas Buford.

"All that he and his beloved sister possessed in the world had been invested in that four-hundred-and-twenty-acre tract of land, with a defective title, a circumstance well known in the neighborhood at the time of the purchase, but was not then made known to the purchasers, who were perfect strangers in that part of the country; and the vendors, availing themselves of the ensuing 'hard times' and shrinkage of values to repossess themselves of the whole tract, in satisfaction of a judgment and execution for the last two notes, of only $6,250 each, while at the same time holding on to the $22,500 paid by the Bufords, thus taking away from the devisees of Mary Buford, and especially from Thomas Buford, their only means of support in the evening of his days, now considerably advanced. For this, in brief, is a true statement of the whole case. To the common understanding, unenlightened, or, we should better say, unwarped by the absurdities of legal lore, this may be good law, but certainly it does not look like justice or equity. Buford looked upon it and called it, when the first adverse decision was rendered, 'downright robbery.' Whether this was said in a lucid interval or not, there were many who, being acquainted with the peculiar hardship of the case, were disposed, at the time, to cover the remark with the mantle of charity, while others indorsed it as fully warranted by the facts.

"Buford seemed never to have the least doubt of his final success, believing that he had not only 'the law and the testimony,' but all 'the moral equities,' on his side, and, when any other result was suggested, or even hinted at, in his presence, it seemed to un hinge utterly a mind never at any time well geared, and he would give utterance to his maddened feelings in language of insane violence; for the sum involved, about $25,000, was not only a large one, but outside of it he possessed not one cent in the world. Up to the very last moment, however, Buford had hoped and believed, as he had a right to do, that the court of last resort in his native state would do him the justice to order the repayment to him and his sister’s devisees of the $22,000, his and their all, which had been taken from them by parties for a house and land to which they could not or would not, at that time, nor for many years afterward, if, indeed, they ever could, make any valid title; and when the final, cruel disappointment came, the blow was crushing, desperate, murderous. It overthrew his chronically-jangled reason utterly, and from that time forward until the terrible tragedy of March 26, 1879, which fell upon the community like a double-shotted clap of thunder out of a clear sky, he was a wholly-irresponsible being.

“When one of the honored judges of our Court of Appeals, the supreme court of Kentucky, was shot down on the street of the capital, apparently in cold blood, by a defeated litigant in that court, Thomas Buford, whose bloody deed seemed at the first blush to present all the characteristics of a deliberately-planned assassination, a thrill of intense horror and indignation flashed through the entire state, extending over the republic, and ultimately to the remotest borders of civilization, wherever the intelligence was borne on the wings of the telegraph and the newspaper press.

"This was natural, in view of 'the divinity that doth hedge' a pure and upright judiciary in all free and enlightened countries, and it was natural, too, that, in the city where the terrible deed was done, the indignation of men should mount to an almost uncontrorollable pitch of intensity, and for a time threaten mob violence to the perpetrator of so unparalleled a deed of deadly violence.

"To say that Thomas Buford was not insane when he committed so fearful a deed of death, so atrocious a crime, that is, what would have been so, if done by a sane man of education and refinement, is to place humanity, civilized and enlightened humanity, on a lower lever than has ever yet been assigned to it by the most cynical. His whole conduct, as well before the homicide as afterward, was that of a lunatic, with, of course, occasional lucid intervals, occasional glimpses of that gallant, truthful spirit, that fearless, chivalric old pioneer blood which flowed in his veins.

"Who, for illustration, that knew Thomas Buford in his lucid intervals, before the lawsuit began to go against him, and has heard him uniformly give utterance to sentiments characteristic of a noble.
true-hearted, and chivalrous gentleman; heard him denounce wrong and cruelty in all their forms, and especially the unutterably vile and unpardonable meanness of the assassin, who takes every advantage of his enemy, or the object of his hatred, to perpetrate a hideous crime; who, we say, that knew Thomas Buford's real self, and when not completely metamorphosed by his terrible infirmity, can doubt for one moment that he was hopelessly insane, utterly non compos mentis, when he killed a judge of the Court of Appeals, one with whom he had ever been on friendly terms, and one, too, who professed to have acted as his best friend in that high tribunal?"

To his family, to his friends, and, perhaps, to his enemies, this statement may seem unnecessary; they know that his life was one long, hopeless, unending struggle with the demon, which was to conquer in the end. But to his kinsmen, who have perhaps heard few of the facts, it is submitted, with the hope that they may at least judge fairly and with charity.

Many stronger, better balanced minds than Thomas Buford's would have given way under such a strain; it is not given to us all to feel intensely our wrongs. A jury of his fellow-citizens most righteously adjudged him insane. He lived but a few years after the tragedy, and died quietly, without realizing what he had done.

Sophia Margaretta Knox, wife of John Buford, was a descendant of William Murray, Lord Mansfield, the jurist. The first of the Murray family in America was James, of Bristol Parish, 1716, who was a native of Scotland. He perpetuated the name of the ancestral seat in Scotland in that of his home, "Athol," near Petersburg. He married Anne. Issue—James, born July 10, 1743; John, September 13, 1744; Anne, August 30, 1746; Margaret, February 8, 1748; William, May 6, 1752; Mary, February 22, 1754; Thomas, June 13, 1757. James and John Murray owned large estates in Mecklenburg County, near what is now Chase City, then called Christianville. Margaret Murray married Thomas Gordon. Issue—Nancy, who married Henry E. Coleman, of Halifax County. William Murray inherited the family seat, "Athol," and was known as the "Duke of Athol." Mary Murray married, first, Alexander Gordon, a merchant of Petersburg and a native of Scotland; second, Colonel William Davies (son of Rev. Samuel Davies, the apostle of Presbyterianism in Virginia), who was a graduate of Princeton College, read law with Richard Stockton, who had acted as his guardian, returned to Virginia at the beginning of the Revolution, enlisted in the army, and attained the rank of colonel, served with distinction, enjoying the friendship of Washington, and was Commissioner of War. After the war he was employed at Philadelphia, to settle the war claims of Virginia. Afterwards he settled at Blandford, and practised his profession. He was appointed by Washington, collector of the Port of Norfolk, which position he held until 1801.

Alexander and Mary Murray Gordon had issue—Peggy, married, first, William Knox, of Philadelphia, who died, in 1809, in Petersburg; married, second, Colonel Greif Green, a lawyer, of Mecklenburg County. TAYLOR.

Elizabeth Hamilton (see James Buford 3d) and Delia (see Albert Buford, above) were daughters of Dr. Gilbert D. Taylor, who married Delia McCormick. Both these families were very early settlers, and prominent in Giles County. Dr. Taylor was a preacher and physician, and a soldier in the Creek War of 1813. Mention is made of him in McCullum's "Manuscript History of Giles County," now in the custody of the Historical Society in Nashville.

He built the first frame house in this county. People used to go miles and miles to see it, as a curiosity. The lumber was all whip sawed out by his slaves before the day of sawmills. The old place is now owned by John T. Allen. It is three miles north of Pulaski, Tennessee, and on the west side of the Columbia and Pulaski pike. The house was burned some years ago.
yard is on a little wooded knoll back of the house and garden, in a beech grove.

Dr. Gilbert D. was the son of Captain John Taylor, born October 26, 1760, married Ann Gilbert. John was a lieutenant in the Continental Line, served in the State Convention Guards from January 18, 1779, to January 15, 1781, when the regiment was disbanded. This made Lieutenant Taylor a supernumerary officer entitled to pay and bounty lands for service to the end of the war. A warrant was issued, in 1832, for two thousand six hundred and sixty-six acres of land to him in trust, which was delivered to J. C. Taylor in 1834. By act of Congress, May 30, 1834, he was granted five years' full pay, and was paid sixteen hundred dollars. John was the fifth son of Erasmus, who married Jane Moore. He was the son of James 2d, who married Martha Thompson. Their son Richard married Sarah Strother. Sons—Zachary, President and general; Joseph, many years quartermaster general of the army. General Zachary's daughter, Sarah Knox, married Jefferson Davis. Another son of James 2d had many sons, some of them Revolutionary officers. James 1st, father of James 2d, came from Carlisle, England, and settled on the Chesapeake Bay, in 1698.

Jefferson Buford married, for second wife, in November, 1858,

In the spring of 1856, when the question of the right to introduce slaves into the territories was being agitated, Jefferson Buford, who was then conducting a newspaper in Eufaula, Alabama, issued a call for three hundred volunteers, ostensibly to settle in Kansas, but really to invade the territory, and by force make it a slave state, promising them, by way of inducements, transportation, support for one year, and a homestead. He succeeded in raising the company, and fitted out the expedition, largely at his own expense. To reimburse him for this outlay, it was understood that each member of the company was to take up a claim, one-half of which was to be turned over to him. The greater part of these adventurers were reckless characters; it must not be supposed, however, that all the company were vicious men; some amiable, high-toned young men, poor, but well connected, were among them. They were collected from Alabama, the Carolinas, Mississippi, and Georgia.

The expedition was armed and formed into companies, with Colonel Buford in command, and proceeded up the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers. On its arrival in Kansas City, Missouri, they were drawn up in military array, and, amidst the enthusiasm.
the pro-slavery party called upon the members to give a pledge and take the oath that they would not leave Kansas until it was made a free state. Buford disclaimed having come to Kansas to destroy property. There was some misunderstanding on the part of the young adventurers as to the terms of their contract, but finally all signed and took the oath. For some time they were quartered on the border between Missouri and Kansas, sustained by contributions and food from home and from the neighboring counties in Missouri. Most of the better class of the young men deserted, and went home disgusted with their companions and the duties entailed on them by the pro-slavery conquest.

Buford's company, with the Missouri contingent, in all about eight hundred men, in May moved into Kansas. Lawrence was peacefully surrendered by the free-state men to them; they took possession of the town and sacked it. It is well to add that they were acting under the guidance of the governor and state authorities. After this a guerilla warfare was kept up for some time, Buford's men entering into it actively. John Brown and his sons appeared on the scene, and whipped the pro-slaves at Palmyra; afterwards both parties concentrated their forces at Franklin. Buford was with them, with a quantity of arms and stores, which were captured, and the pro-slaves driven off. After some desultory fighting and manuevering to avoid fighting, on the part of both parties, with the United States troops as a third party, the pro-slaves confined themselves to the Indian Reservation along the frontier, until their depredations became so annoying that the Indians complained to their agent, who asked the United States troops to interfere, which they did, and drove the pro-slaves into Missouri. Buford felt very sore, and complained to the governor of the territory, who assured him "that he would have no difficulty in coming into the territory with bonafide settlers." During June the pro-slaves were kept in Missouri; in July politicians took a hand, and finally succeeded in getting the President to use United States forces for the dispersal of the Legislature. This was done on the 4th of July, and the territory lay at the mercy of the pro-slavery party. The venture did not succeed financially, as few of the company became permanent residents of Kansas, but there is no doubt that the appearance of Buford on the border greatly encouraged the pro-slavery leaders, and they said, "The noble Buford is endeared to our hearts; we love him; we will fight for him, and will die for him and his companions." The conception and the execution of this reckless adventure by Buford were only equaled by John Brown's opposition to it, and the latter's crusade into Maryland was but another step towards the Civil War.

After living a few years in Murray County, Goodloe Warren removed to Yalobusha County, Mississippi, in 1834, and located near where Oakland now stands, and remained there one year; sold out and went to College Hill, having purchased four sections of land,—I, 2, 3, and II. He was the first of the family to go there, as he had been the first to go to Murray County. At that time the land was covered with a somewhat scattering growth of large timber, with grass everywhere as high as a man's head. The Indians were settled in groups, in tents, mud huts, and log cabins. Game of all kinds was abundant, deer roving about in droves of sixty to one hundred, or more.

Goodloe Warren devoted his attention to his farm, except that he stumped the county for Henry Clay, in 1844. He raised about one hundred bales of cotton a year, hauling the early bales to Memphis on wagons, and shipping the later ones down the Tallahatchie on steamboats, which then ran in winter as far up as Rocky Ford. They were devout Presbyterians, and Mr. Buford took a lively interest in church and educational matters. He gave a quarter section of land to found a college, of which gift the outgrowth was North Mississippi College, as well as the village of College Hill.
